ITALIANS BOMB ETHIOPIANS, ONE FASCIST PLANE FALLS IN FLAMES

Ten Killed, 15 Wounded in Air Raid South of Makale — Four Flyers, Including Two Officers, Lose Lives in Crash.

WOUNDED SWEDISH NURSE DIES AT DOLO

Victim of Recent Attack on Red Cross Unit — Rome Communique Tells of Gains in Fighting on Eritrean Front.

By the Associated Press.

ADDIS ABABA, Jan. 4.—A telegram reporting that the American field hospital at Daggah Bur, formerly headed by Dr. Robert Hockman of Wheaton, Ill., had been bombed was received today by Dr. T. A. Lambie, head of the Ethiopian Red Cross. The message gave no details of the reported bombardment.

Dr. Hockman recently was killed when a dud bomb exploded.

The Government said later in an announcement that six Italian planes participated in the bombardment.

Daggah Bur is in Southeastern Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 4.—An official communique says the Italians lost their fourth plane in flames yesterday on the Ethiopian war front. The plane caught fire over the Cafta region, and its occupants—two officers, an observer and a non-commissioned pilot—were killed.

The communique continues:

"Our aviation executed two bombardments—one against a strong enemy group moving toward our lines on the caravan road between Socota and Seloa, and another in the Cafta region against an Ethiopian war encampment.

"Yesterday on the Eritrean front, in the Tembien sector and southwest of Makale, there was intense activity by reconnoitering patrols. Enemy groups were dispersed all along our line. In various actions there were killed on our side six Italians and two natives."

ADDIS ABABA, Jan. 4.—An Ethiopian Government communique says a fleet of Italian planes heavily bombarded the region south of Makale, on the northern front, killing ten persons and wounding 15.

The announcement says the Fascist flyers dropped 3000 bombs on the sector where Emperor Haile Selassie's men have been reported encountering the Italian invaders in the first general Ethiopian offensive.

The Swedish Red Cross representative, Dr. Hanner, who flew to Dolo yesterday to investigate the wounding of Swedish Red Cross workers during an Italian air raid last Monday on the southern front, returned today and said that Gunner Lundstrom, a Swedish nurse whose jaw was torn away, died of his wounds the day after the bombing.

Dr. Eric Smith, another of the wounded, also was flown to the capital.

GOLD ACCOUNTING DEMANDED

Resolution on Treasury's Purchases Offered by Treadway.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—An accounting by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau of Government gold purchases since March 4, 1933, was demanded yesterday in a resolution by Representative Treadway (Rep.) Massachusetts.

Treadway's resolution directs Morgenthau to report the price paid, the amount now in the treasury, the expenditure since March 4, 1933, for storage facilities, and the extent to which the price of gold in foreign countries has increased since the Treasury Department began its gold-purchase program.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4.—Theft of $35,000 in jewelry from Mrs. Edity Mayer Goetz, wife of William Goetz, film studio executive, while she was a guest at a Palm Springs hotel, was reported to Los Angeles police today. Mrs. Goetz is the daughter of Louis B. Mayer, movie producer.

Italians Deliberately Bombed Red Cross, Swedish Doctor Says

Head of Dolo Detachment Declares He Was Fired on After Fascist Aviators Knew He Was Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

ADDIS ABABA, Jan. 4.—Dr. Fried Hylander, chief of the Swedish Red Cross unit which was bombed by Italian planes Monday near Dolo, gave an eye-witness account today of the raid.

The attack was an "utterly deliberate act," said Dr. Hylander, who was brought here for an operation.

"For several days before the bombing, Italian planes had machine-gunned all around the ambulance," he asserted.

"The morning of the bombing, I was in the operating theater when a perfect tornado of bombs and machine gun bullet suddenly rained down on us.

"I had just time to see two lines of three planes each enfilading the ambulance when I was hit and lost consciousness.

"When I opened my eyes again, it was to see the most terrible scene of carnage imaginable.

"Scores of dead, dying and wounded lay around me amid the shrieks and groans of wounded men and the crackle of blazing tents. One tent had 425 bullet holes in it.

"There was absolutely no excuse for the raid. The ambulance had Red Cross emblems prominently displayed, in accordance with the international convention.

"The 28 Ethiopians killed were blown a distance of 10 meters off their beds in our camp.

"Our camp was nearly a mile from the troops of Ras Desta Demtu (son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie and Ethiopian commander on the Southern front).

Dr. Hylander said that after he regained consciousness "a Swedish male nurse helped me run to the woods. An Italian plane, flying low, chased us, machine-gunning continually although they knew I was already hurt."

"The wounded Swedes and Ethiopians worked magnificently," he added, "but the blazing tents, fumes from bombs and general confusion made the work most difficult and dangerous. Practically all our stores were destroyed.

"The Italian allegation that Ethiopian chiefs took refuge in our tent is baseless. Even the military escort provided to us by Ras Desta was not in the ambulance."

ETHIOPIA ASKS LEAGUE TO SEND COMMISSION OF INQUIRY TO WAR ZONE

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Jan. 4.

ETHIOPIA asked the League of Nations today to send a commission of inquiry to the African battlefields to investigate war conditions and establish responsibility for "war cruelty."

Emperor Haile Selassie's request was made to the League Committee of 13, which was appointed at the last meeting of the Council to examine the Italian-Ethiopian conflict in all its aspects. The committee is really the League Council itself, minus the two belligerents, Italy and Ethiopia.

PERSIA RECALLS MINISTER SEIZED IN U. S. AS SPEEDER

Reason for Action as to Envoy Figuring in Diplomatic Incident Is Not Given.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Iranian (Persian) legation announced today that Minister Ghaffar Djalal has been recalled by his Government. The envoy recently figured in a diplomatic incident when he was arrested on a speeding charge at Elkton, Md.

The Minister's secretary said she was not informed as to the reason for his recall. Djalal was absent from the legation.

Djalal was arrested at Elkton Nov. 27. He protested to the State Department. Secretary of State Hull publicly expressed his regrets, but simultaneously gave a general hit to diplomats that their diplomatic immunity should not be abused. The form of Hull's statement was said to have irked the Shah, who desired an unqualified apology.

The two officers who arrested Djalal were dismissed. Constable Clayton L. Ellison was taken back, but dismissed yesterday a second time by the Elkton Town Council.

COLLECTION CO. UNDER FIRE AGREES TO QUIT

The National Alliance Corporation, a collection agency at 3908 Olive street, which the St. Louis Bar Association charged with improper practice of law, agreed in a stipulation filed today with Circuit Judge John W. Joynt, to appointment of a receiver to liquidate the business which, the stipulation said, was insolvent.

The stipulation agreed also to an injunction restraining the company from the improper practice of law, and to a court order for an accounting of transactions between the company and one of its clients which was cited in the Bar Association's complaint. It agreed that the arrangement under which the company has been operated did constitute improper practice of law.

Within a few days, it is expected, the Court will issue a decree in accordance with the stipulation which was signed for the company by its attorney, C. H. Dycus, and for the Bar Association by its committee on the improper practice of law.

As set out in the stipulation, the company secured "what purported to be assignments" of past due bills and other obligations and sought to collect them by personal visits of its collectors and letters on the stationery of a lawyer which threatened suit.

The company had an arrangement with an attorney who was paid a fee for the use of his name and letterhead, and when suits were filed, the stipulation said, it split fees with him. The company paid nothing for the assignments it received, but made a service charge of $5 against those who turned over past due bills to it, and deducted a commission of 25 per cent on the amount collected.

The accounting was ordered in the case of Dr. W. H. Allen Jr. of Hume, Mo., for whom the company made collections totaling $361. The company secured a claim of $205 against Dr. Allen on a promissory note, the stipulation agreed, and used this to offset whatever Dr. Allen would have received on the other accounts. He received no part of the $361 the company collected on his accounts.

MARCONI NOT GOING TO WAR

Inventor to Resume Experiments With Micro-Waves.

ROME, Jan. 4.—Guglielmo Marconi, Italian inventor, has abandoned his plan to join the Italian forces in East Africa, deciding today instead to resume his experiments with micro-waves at home.

Although most of his experiments were cloaked in secrecy, it has been reported Marconi gave a demonstration before a group of naval officers in 1934 in which he used micro-waves from a land station to pilot a ship into a harbor near Genoa.

TWO SCIENTISTS SHARE 1935 PRIZE OF ASSOCIATION

Dr. Percy W. Zimmerman and Dr. Albert E. Hitchcock Get $1000 Award for Noteworthy Paper.

The $1000 award of the American Association for the Advancement of Science for a noteworthy paper read at its convention, was given today to Dr. Percy W. Zimmerman and Dr. Albert E. Hitchcock, both of the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research at Yonkers, N. Y. The convention, in session here this week, ended today.

Dr. Zimmerman and Dr. Hitchcock, plant physiologists, gained the award for three papers on related subjects which the award committee summarized as: "The Responses of Plants to Synthetic Growth Substances (Phyto-hormones)." These papers were read Wednesday at a session of the Botanical Society of America, one of the 152 affiliated organizations which met in conjunction with the convention of the American Association.

The two scientists who share the award reported in their papers that their experiments in plant propagation had immediate practical value in agriculture and might ultimately be of importance in animal biology.

"Probably the particular growth-promoting substances which have been found effective in plants are chemically quite unrelated to the growth hormone of higher animals," they said, "but since the mechanism of action of the growth hormone is unknown, this elucidation of plant growth should contribute to an understanding of growth in animals."

Dr. Hitchcock, a native of Manhattan, Kan., is 38 years old. Dr. Zimmerman, who was born at Manito, Ill., is 52. He formerly was dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Maryland.

No effort was made to select the "best" paper read at the convention because of the difficulty of comparison in the various fields of science.

The next regular winter meeting will be held Dec. 28 to Jan. 3 at Washington, D. C. A summer session at Rochester, N. Y., at a date to be announced, will precede it.

More Than 1100 Papers Read.

More than 1100 papers on scientific subjects have been read at the convention, which Dr. Karl Taylor Compton, president of the association, said today has been marked by "the announcement of notable advances in science." The importance of findings reported, in numerous cases, will not be apparent until further development or adaptation.

"The proceedings have been followed by scientists and engineers everywhere," Dr. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and chairman of the Science Advisory Board appointed by President Roosevelt, said in discussing the St. Louis meeting.

"No longer is the scientist a cloistered ponderer, untouched by the passing world," Dr. Compton observed. "The keynote of this meeting has been a keen interest in the effects of the applications of science upon the life of the nation and its citizens. The scientist recognizes his social responsibilities and feels keenly the influence which his work may have upon coming generations.

"Moreover, the meeting has been permeated by a spirit of optimism. There is confidence in the future, enhanced by the habit of the scientist to look beyond the immediate and to reason unemotionally."

The section on anthropology held its concluding meeting today at Washington University Medical School and Pi Gamma Mu, national social science honor society, met at a breakfast at Hotel Jefferson. A dinner of the dental section at Hotel Statler this evening will complete its program.

The present meeting was the fourth the association has held in St. Louis. It met here in 1878, 1903 and 1919. Arrangements for the meeting were made by the St. Louis Academy of Science, Washington University and St. Louis University.

ROOSEVELT CHALLENGES CRITICS; 'POLITICAL HARANGUE,' SAYS G. O. P.

SPEECH ASSAILED AND DEFENDED BY PARTY LEADERS

KNOX RESPONDS WITH HIS PROGRAM

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, criticised the address of President Roosevelt to Congress, calling it "a political harangue."

"Aside from the neutrality feature," he said, "the speech was what we expected it to be. It did not give to Congress information of the state of the Union, nor recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.

"It was a political harangue; it was a challenge to a straw man to submit to a subservient and gagged Congress the favorite socialistic features of the New Deal."

Knox Offers Program.

Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher, mentioned as a possible Republican presidential candidate, in a statement today said the President's message was "an undisguised political speech by the prospective candidate of the Democratic party."

"Specifically, Candidate Roosevelt demanded that his opposition provide an explicit alternative program if they were dissatisfied with the fruits of the New Deal," he said. "That is not difficult. Here is one:

"1. Immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenses.

"2. A sound currency to be maintained at all hazards.

"3. Maintenance of the national credit by a Federal budget annually balanced.

"4. Unemployment and old-age insurance under state laws.

"5. The removal of the Government from all fields of private enterprise.

"6. Opposition to the unsound policy of restricting agricultural production.

Congressional Views.

Congressional comment ranged from "wonderful and courageous" to "rabble-rousing." The reaction for the most part was determined by party lines.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, majority leader, said: "The President defends the New Deal and challenges its opponents in words that ring with confidence and defiance. . . . The message is confined to a discussion of 'the state of the Union' and leaves for future occasions specific suggestions touching legislation."

Senator Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan, retorted: "It's not the opening of Congress; it is the opening of a political campaign which will be hot, rabble-rousing and intolerant."

Senator Borah, Independent Republican of Idaho, had nothing to say about the message itself except that it was "superbly delivered."

Senator Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, thought it was a "fine appeal. . . . A challenge to the Old Guard in the Republican party."

Republicans' Comment.

Senator Hastings, Delaware: "His 20-minute talk on world affairs was unnecessary, unbecoming and possibly dangerous."

Senator Davis, Pennsylvania: "I do hope he will again return to Congress and the radio audience nex week and personally read the cold statistical budget message which should honestly tell the taxpayers where the vast amounts appropriated have gone since March, 1933."

Senator Capper, Kansas: "The first half of the speech regarding the world peace situation was very fine. The last part had a lot of politics in it."

Senator McNary, Oregon: "A dramatic speech, but it did not discuss the problems of the present."

Federal District Judge Decides for Government, Which Was Denied Union Trust Co. Data.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 4.—United States District Judge Robert E. Gibson today upheld the Government's subpena in the long drawn out Andrew W. Mellon income tax case for the records of the $300,000,000 Union Trust Co., a Mellon interest.

The bank declined at a hearing by the Board of Tax Appeals several months ago to turn over its records, contending the subpena amounted to unconstitutional search and seizure. The Government has maintained they are necessary to continue its case to collect nearly $3,000,000 it alleges is due in income taxes and penalties from the former Secretary of the Treasury for the year 1931.

C. OF C. HEAD CALLS 'GREED' REMARK OF PRESIDENT 'UNFAIR'

Harper Sibley Says Business Men Should Not Be Attacked for Opposing New Deal Laws.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said today he felt President Roosevelt's castigation of business as "entrenched greed" was decidedly "unfair and unreasonable."

"Business men generally have worked for the welfare of the country and they should not be attacked because they are not unanimously in favor of all the measures of the New Deal.

"I think the most unfortunate thing about the President's speech is that it was so decidedly political. It was certainly not a statesmanlike address."

PEIPING TRAIN HELD UP; 9 SHOT

Three Bandits Raid Express; Two Japanese Among Wounded.

TIENTSIN, Jan. 4.—Three bandits held up the northbound Peiping-to-Mukden express near Peitaiho, 150 miles northeast of here, last night, wounding nine passengers, including two Japanese. The bandits escaped.

The holdup occurred within the northern demilitarized zone and was the first serious incident in that area since it became the Japanese-supported East Hopeh autonomous state.

PREMIERE OF SHAW COMEDY

VIENNA, Jan. 4.—George Bernard Shaw's new comedy, "The Millionairess," will have its world premiere here tonight. One critic who witnesses a dress rehearsal of the production said it was "Old Man Shaw's sour comment on one aspect of the modern world."

The heroine of the play is a millionairess who thinks money can buy anything—and proves it to her own satisfaction by trying a succession of husbands. "Ninety per cent of the millionaires are crooks" is one Shavian observation.

PRESIDENT INVITES THE OPPOSITION TO PROPOSE REPEAL OF NEW DEAL ACTS

Says No New Taxes Are Needed, Predicts Lightening of Relief Burden and Speaks of 'Approach to Balanced Budget.'

URGES CONGRESS TO EXTEND NEUTRALITY

Declares U. S. Will Not Encourage Belligerents by Trade but Do Everything Legitimate to Dissuade Them From War.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Using the convening of the second session of the seventy-fourth Congress as the occasion for a radio address to the American people, President Roosevelt last night challenged opponents to propose the repeal of New Deal legislation in Congress, and, in the foreign field, served notice on the world in general that by "well-ordered neutrality" the United States and the rest of the Americas would do nothing to encourage the ambitions of rulers animated by the "twin spirits of autocracy and aggression."

The address was delivered in the packed chamber of the House of Representatives to the assembled Senators and Representatives and was broadcast over nationwide networks to the American voters. Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National Committee had protested against the broadcasting of what he anticipated would be a political speech and demanded equal time from the broadcasting companies for Republican replies, but no official Republican objection was made when the House recessed in the early afternoon to meet again at 8:45 p. m. to hear the President make his report on "the state of the Union."

Fletcher Guessed Right.

Fletcher had guessed right. More than half of the speech was political and immediately drew fire from Republican Senators and Representatives. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, mentioned as a possible Republican candidate for President, observed:

"It's not the opening of Congress; it is the opening of a political campaign which will be hot, rabble-rousing and intolerant."

Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for the presidency, who listened to the address over the radio, described it as "the speech of a clever political preacher."

"The President's address," said Thomas, "was good theater, good preaching and probably good politics. But it put forward no program at all."

Fletcher himself called it a "political harangue."

Republicans, off the record, admired the President's technique and admitted that he had made one of the "slickest" campaign speeches they had ever listened to. These same Republicans, however, kept a grim silence during most of the speech, while the Democrats whooped and hollered at the President's oratorical periods. Derisive laughter came from the Republicans when the President mentioned the "approach" to a balancing of the budget and the reduction of the national debt. Similar derision greeted the President's final mention of his message "on the state of the Union." This was the Republican way of showing that they thought the President had made a political speech.

No Specific Recommendations.

The address made no specific recommendation and the President's declaration that "no new taxes, over and above the present taxes, are advisable or necessary" was based on the "existing laws."

The President made no mention of the bonus, or the possibility that the United States Supreme Court might find the processing taxes of the Agricultural Adjustment Ad-

'FASCIST PATTERN' SAID TO BE FORMING IN U. S.

Dr. H. F. Ward Sees Evidence in C. of C., Liberty League and Sensational Press.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 4.—Dr. Harry F. Ward of Union Theological Seminary, New York, in an address to the Congress of the American League Against War and Fascism today, said the "pattern of Fascism" is forming in the United States.

"The conference of industry brings together the little manufacturers and the big industrialists, with the master financiers in the background, while Roper looks after their interests at Washington," Dr. Ward said.

"The Chamber of Commerce works for the most vicious gag laws in our history, the Liberty League prates about the Constitution, while the Bill of Rights is being smashed, the sensational press and its accompanying pack of garbage-eating jackals stirs up hate against the 'reds,' so that they can be ruled off the ballot, flung into jail and be clubbed by ignorant and corrupted police and deputies."

He said the only way Fascism could be "stopped from coming to power in this country is to unite all those who, for any reason whatever, are willing to defend the democratic process."

Major-General Smedley D. Butler, in a speech last night, said that the Ethiopian situation was "only a trial of strength to determine the lineup of nations" for a second world war, "soon to begin, probably in the Far East."

Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner of Cleveland said religion and war were incompatible. Of Fascism, he said: "We have all the raw material out of which Fascism can be molded and is being molded right here in this country."

INCREASE IN U. S. PAYROLL

Addition of 3782 in November Makes Total of 800,079.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—There were 800,079 persons on the Government's civil payroll at the end of November—an increase of 3782 during the month. In reporting this yesterday, the Civil Service Commission said the figure did not include the legislative and judicial branches of the Government.

Employes in agencies existing prior to the New Deal, declined 3388 during the month to 602,230. Those in agencies created by the New Deal and regarded as permanent, declined 1040 to 59,099. Relief agencies and those financed by the work-relief appropriation added 8210 employes to their payrolls.

THREE NEUTRALITY BILLS INTRODUCED; ANOTHER DRAFTED

Committees to Begin Hearings Next Week—Two Measures Said to Have Administration Backing.

DIFFER IN ONE WORD ON QUOTA EXPORTS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—House and Senate committees will begin hearings on neutrality legislation next week.

Three bills on the subject were introduced yesterday, one by Chairman McReynolds of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, one by Senator Pittman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and one by Representative Ludlow (Dem.), Indiana.

McReynolds, asserting his bill was "satisfactory to the administration," proposed giving the President wide authority in deciding under what conditions the shipment of abnormal quantities of non-munition materials should be restricted.

Pittman's bill also said to have administration backing requires the executive to impose normal quota shipments on all belligerents if it is found that non-munitions purchases are being diverted to military uses.

The quota order would be mandatory, Pittman said. However, some who read the measure said it gave the President greater leeway in imposing export quotas than Pittman contended.

Ludlow's bill forbids American exports or loans of any kind to belligerents, and imposes restrictions on Americans traveling on foreign vessels during war.

Difference in One Word.

The actual difference between McReynolds and Pittman bills is in one word.

The McReynolds bill provides that when the President finds that quota restrictions would "promote the security and preserve the neutrality of the United States . . . and shall so proclaim," then it shall be unlawful to export in excess of determined quotas.

In the Pittman bill the language is the same except that when the President finds quota restrictions would "promote" neutrality, then "he shall so proclaim." This, Pittman contended, made his measure mandatory and the other discretionary.

Another bill will be introduced Monday. This one—drafted by Senators Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, and Clark (Dem.), Missouri, makes mandatory rules for the Executive. Under its provisions, when the President discovers increasing exports of war materials, such as steel, copper and oil, to belligerents, he is required to prohibit all but normal shipments as determined by a five or 10-year average.

No Demand by President.

Pittman denied that the President and the State Department had insisted on having wide discretionary power.

"The Secretary of State and the President have said nothing regarding the matter," Pittman said.

McReynolds said he intended to amend his bill to permit the President to discriminate in behalf of South American nations, but Pittman declared this should not be included in the measure.

McReynolds will propose that American nations at war with European countries be permitted to buy war materials and arms in this country, but that in wars with each other, the embargo be applied.

Other Provisions of Bill.

Other provisions of the Pittman bill, and paralleled generally by the Nye and McReynolds bills, include:

Restrictions on loans to belligerents.

Impositions of penalties, the Nye measure proposing a $100,000 maximum fine, with the others suggesting $10,000. All proposed an accompanying five-year imprisonment.

Embargoes and other restriction must apply equally to all belligerents.

American vessels prohibited from carrying arms or munitions to belligerents, or to neutrals for transshipment to belligerents.

The President could withdraw diplomatic protection to persons doing business with belligerents and make them operate at their own risk.

Citizens would be prohibited from traveling on belligeren vessels.

The President could modify commercial treaties between the United States and any foreign country if he found them in conflict with the Munitions Act.

Text of President's Message to Congress

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.

Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives:

We are about to enter upon another year of the responsibility which the electorate of the United States has placed in our hands. Having come so far, it is fitting that we should pause to survey the ground which we have covered and the path which lies ahead.

On the fourth day of March, 1933, on the occasion of taking the oath of office as President of the United States, I addressed the people of our country. Need I recall either the scene or the national circumstances attending the occasion? The crisis of that moment was almost exclusively a national one. In recognition of that fact, so obvious to the millions in the streets and in the homes of America, I devoted by far the greater part of that address to what I called, and the nation called, critical days within our own borders.

Doctrine of the Good Neighbor.

You will remember that on that fourth of March, 1933, the world picture was an image of substantial peace. International consultation and widespread hope for the bettering of relations between the nations gave to all of us a reasonable expectation that the barriers to mutual confidence, to increased trade, and to the peaceful settlement of disputes could be progressively removed. In fact my only reference to the field of world policy in that address was in these words: "I would dedicate this nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who resolutely respects himself and, because he does so respects the rights of others—a neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors."

In the years that have followed, that sentiment has remained the dedication of this nation. Among the nations of the great Western hemisphere the policy of the good neighbor has happily prevailed. At no time in the four and a half centuries of modern civilization in the Americas has there existed —in any year, any decade, or any generation in all that time — a greater spirit of mutual understanding, of common helpfulness, and of devotion to the ideals of self-government than exists today in the 21 American republics and their neighbor, the Dominion of Canada. This policy of the good neighbor among the Americas is no longer a hope—no longer an objective remaining to be accomplished—it is a fact, active, present, pertinent and effective. In this achievement, every American nation takes an understanding part. There is neither war, nor rumor of war, nor desire for war. The inhabitants of this vast area, two hundred and fifty million strong, spreading more than 8000 miles from the Arctic to the Antarctic, believe in, and propose to follow, the policy of the good neighbor; they wish with all their heart that the rest of the world might do likewise.

Disturbances in Europe.

The rest of the world—ah! there is the rub.

Were I today to deliver an inaugural address to the people of the United States, I could not limit my comments on world affairs to one paragraph. With much regret I should be compelled to devote the greater part to world affairs. Since the summer of that same year of 1933, the temper and the purposes of the rulers of many of the great populations in Europe and in Asia have not pointed the way either to peace or to good will among men. Not only have peace and good will among men grown more remote in those areas of the earth during this period, but a point has been reached where the people of the Americas must take cognizance of growing ill will, or marked trends toward aggression, of increasing armaments, of shortening tempers—a situation which has in it many of the elements that lead to the tragedy of general war.

On those other continents many nations, principally the smaller ones, if left to themselves, would be content with their boundaries and willing to solve within themselves and in co-operation with their neighbors their individual problems, both economic and social. The rulers of those nations, deep in their hearts, follow these peaceful and reasonable aspirations of their peoples. These rulers must remain ever vigilant against the possibility today or tomorrow of invasion or attack by the rulers of other peoples who fail to subscribe to the principles of bettering the human race by peaceful means.

Grounds for Pessimism.

Within those other nations—those which today must bear the primary, definite responsibility for jeopardizing world peace—what hope lies? To say the least, there are grounds for pessimism. It is idle for us or for others to preach that the masses of the people who constitute those nations which are dominated by the twin spirits of autocracy and aggression, are out of sympathy with their rulers, that they are allowed no opportunity to express themselves, that they would change things if they could.

That, unfortunately, is not so clear. It might be true that the masses of the people in those nations would change the policies of their governments if they could be allowed full freedom and full access to the processes of democratic government as we understand them. But they do not have that access. Lacking it they follow blindly and fervently the lead of those who seek autocratic power.

Reversion to Law of the Sword.

Nations seeking expansion, seeking the rectification of injustices springing from former wars, or seeking outlets for trade, for population or even for their own peaceful contributions to the progress of civilization, fail to demonstrate that patience necessary to attain reasonable and legitimate objectives by peaceful negotiation or by an appeal to the finer instincts of world justice.

They have therefore impatiently reverted to the old belief in the law of the sword, or to the fantastic conception that they, and they alone, are chosen to fulfill a mission and that all the others among the billion and a half of human beings must and shall learn from, and be subject to them.

I recognize that these words, which I have chosen with deliberation, will not prove popular in any nation that chooses to fit this shoe to its foot. Such sentiments, however, will find sympathy and understanding in those nations where the people themselves are honestly desirous of peace but must constantly align themselves on one side or the other in the kaleidoscopic jockeying for position characteristic of European and Asiatic relations today. For the peace-loving nations—and there are many of them—find that their very identity depends on their moving and moving again on the chess board of international politics.

Armament Increase.

I suggested in the spring of 1933 that 85 or 90 per cent of all the people in the world were content with the territorial limits of their respective nations and were willing further to reduce their armed forces if every other nation in the world would agree to do likewise.

That is equally true today, and it is even more true today that world peace and world good-will are blocked by only 10 or 15 per cent of the world's population. That is why efforts to reduce armies have thus far not only failed but have been met by vastly increased armaments on land and in the air. That is why even efforts to continue the existing limits on naval armaments into the years to come show such little current success.

But the policy of the United States has been clear and consistent. We have sought with earnestness in every possible way to limit world armaments and to attain the peaceful solution of disputes among all nations.

We have sought by every legitimate means to exert our moral influence against repression, discrimination, intolerance and autocracy and in favor of freedom of expression, equality before the law, religious tolerance and popular rule.

In the field of commerce we have undertaken to encourage a more reasonable interchange of the world's goods. In the field of international finance we have, so far as we are concerned, put an end to dollar diplomacy, money-grabbing and speculation for the benefit of the powerful and rich, at the expense of the small and the poor.

Declaration on Neutrality.

As a consistent part of a clear policy, the United States is following a twofold neutrality toward any and all nations which engage in wars not of immediate concern to the Americas. First, we decline to encourage the prosecution of war by permitting belligerents to obtain arms, ammunition or implements of war from the United States; second, we seek to discourage the use by belligerent nations of any and all American products calculated to facilitate the prosecution of a war in quantities over and above our normal exports to them in time of peace.

I trust that these objectives thus clearly and unequivocally stated will be carried forward by co-operation between this Congress and the President.

I realize that I have emphasized to you the gravity of the situation which confronts the people of the world. This emphasis is justified because of its importance to civilization and therefore to the United States. Peace is jeopardized by the few and not by the many. Peace is threatened by those who seek selfish power. The world has witnessed similar eras —as in the days when petty kings and feudal barons were changing the map of Europe every fortnight, or when great emperors and great kings were engaged in a mad scramble for colonial empire.

We hope that we are not again at the threshold of such an era. But if face it we must, then the United States and the rest of the Americas can play but one role: through a well-ordered neutrality to do naught to encourage the contest, through adequate defense to save ourselves from embroilment and attack, and through example and all legitimate encouragement and assistance to persuade other nations to return to the ways of peace and good will.

Autocracy Endangers Peace.

The evidence before us clearly proves that autocracy in world affairs endangers peace and that such threats to not spring from those nations devoted to the democratic ideal. If this be true in world affairs, it should have the greatest weight in the determination of domestic policies.

Within democratic nations the chief concern of the people is to prevent the continuance or the rise of autocratic institutions that beget slavery at home and aggression abroad. In the United States, as in the world at large, popular opinion is at war with a power-seeking minority.

This is no new thing. It was fought out in the Constitutional Convention of 1787. From time to time since then the battle has been continued, under Jefferson, Jackson, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

More recently we have witnessed the domination of government by financial and industrial groups, numerically small but politically dominant in the 12 years that succeeded the World War. The present group of which I speak is indeed numerically small and, while it exercises a large influence and has much to say in the world of business, it does not, I am confident, speak the true sentiments of the less articulate but more important elements that constitute real American business.

Regulatory Measures.

In March, 1933, I appealed to the Congress and to the people in a new effort to restore power to those to whom it rightfully belonged. The response to that appeal resulted in the writing of a new chapter in the history of popular government. You, the members of the legislative branch, and I, the Executive, contended for and established a new relationship between government and people.

What were the terms of that new relationship? They were an appeal from the clamor of many private and selfish interests, yes, even an appeal from the clamor of partisan interest, to the ideal of the public interest. Government became the representative and the trustee of the public interest. Our aim was to build upon essentially democratic institutions, seeking all the while the adjustment of burdens, the help of the needy, the protection of the weak, the liberation of the exploited and the genuine protection of the people's property.

Struggle for Control.

It goes without saying that to create such an economic constitutional order more than a single legislative enactment was called for. We had to build, you in the Congress, and I, as the Executive, upon a broad base. Now, after 34 months of work, we contemplate a fairly rounded whole. We have returned the control of the Federal Government to the city of Washington.

To be sure, in so doing, we have invited battle. We have earned the hatred of entrenched greed. The very nature of the problem that we faced made it necessary to drive some people from power and strictly to regulate others. I made that plain when I took the oath of office in March, 1933. I spoke of the practice of the unscrupulous money changers who stood indicted in the court of public opinion. I spoke of the rulers of the exchanges of mankind's goods, who failed through their own stubbornness and their own incompetence. I said they they had admitted their failure and had abdicated.

Change in Attitude.

Abdicated? Yes, in 1933, but now with the passing of danger they forget their damaging admissions and withdraw their abdication.

They seek the restoration of their selfish power. They offer to lead us back round the same old corner into the same old dreary street.

Yet there are still determined groups that are intent upon that very thing. Rigorously held up to popular examination their true character reveals itself. They steal the livery of great national constitutional ideals to serve discredited special interests. As guardians and trustees for great groups of individual stockholders they wrongfully seek to carry the property and the interests entrusted to them into the arena of partisan politics. They seek—this minority in business and finance —to control and often do control and use for their own purposes legitimate and highly honored business associations; they engage in vast propaganda to spread fear and discord among the people—they would "gang up" against the people's liberties.

Intentions Evident.

The principle that they would instill into Government if they succeed in seizing power is well shown by the principles which many of them have installed into their own affairs: autocracy toward labor, toward stockholders and toward consumers. Autocrats in smaller things, they seek autocracy in bigger things. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

If these gentlemen believe, as they say they believe, that the measures adopted by this Congress and its predecessor, and carried out by this administration, have hindered rather than promoted recovery, let them be consistent. Let them propose to this Congress the complete repeal of these measures. The way is open to such a proposal.

Let action be positive and not negative. The way is open in the Congress of the United States for an expression of opinion by yeas and nays. Shall we say that values are restored and that the Congress will, therefore, repeal the laws under which we have been bringing them back? Shall we say that because national income has grown with rising prosperity, we shall repeal existing taxes and thereby put off the day of approaching a balanced budget and of starting to reduce the national debt? Shall we abandon the reasonable support and regulation of banking?

Shall we restore the dollar to its former gold content; shall we say to the farmer—"The prices for your products are in part restored, now go and hoe your own row?" Shall we say to the home owners and the debtors—"We have reduced your rates of interest—we have no further concern with how you keep your home or what you pay for your money, that is your affair?"

Shall we say to the several millions of unemployed citizens who face the very problem of existence—of getting enough to eat—"We will withdraw from giving you work, we will turn you back to the charity of your communities and to those men of selfish power who tell you that perhaps they will employ you if the Government leaves them strictly alone?" Shall we say—"Your problem is a local one except that perhaps the Federal Government, as an act of mere generosity, will be willing to pay to your city or to your county a few grudging dollars to help maintain your soup kitchens?"

Child Labor Issue.

Shall we say to the children who have worked all day—"Child labor is a local issue and so are your starvation wages; something to be solved or left unsolved by the jurisdictions of 48 states?" Shall we say to the laborer—"Your right to organize, your relations with your employer have nothing to do with the public interest; if your employer will not even meet with you to discuss your problems and his, that is none of our affair?" Shall we say to the unemployed and the aged—"Social security lies not within the province of the Federal Government, you must seek relief elsewhere?" Shall we say to the men and women who live in conditions of squalor in country and in city—"The health and the happiness of you and your children are no concern of ours?" Shall we expose our population once more by the repeal of laws to protect them against the loss of their honest investments and against the manipulations of dishonest speculators? Shall we abandon the splendid efforts of the Federal Government to raise the health standards of the nation and to give youth a decent opportunity through such means as the Civilian Conservation Corps?

Let these challenges be met. If this is what these gentlemen want, let them say so to the Congress of the United States. Let them no longer hide their dissent in a cowardly cloak of generality. Let them define the issues. We have been specific in our affirmative action. Let them be specific in their negative attack.

But the challenge faced by this Congress is more menacing than merely a return to the past—bad as that would be. Our resplendent economic autocracy does not want to return to that individualism of which they prate, even though the advantages under that system went to the ruthless and the strong. They realize that in 34 months we have built up new instruments of public power. In the hands of a people's government this power is wholesome and proper. But in the hands of political puppets of an economic autocracy such power would provide shackles for the liberties of the people. Give them their way and they will take the course of every autocracy of the past—power for themselves, enslavement for the public.

Their weapon is the weapon of fear. I have said—"the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." That is as true today as it was in 1933. But such fear as they distill today is not a natural fear, a normal fear; it is a synthetic, manufactured, poisonous fear that is being spread subtly, expensively and cleverly by the same people who cried in those other days —"Save us, save us, else we perish."

I am confident that the Congress of the United States well understands the facts and is ready to wage increasing warfare against those who seek a continuation of the spirit of fear. The carrying out of the laws of the land as enacted by the Congress requires protection until final adjudication by the highest tribunal of the land. The Congress has the right and can find the means to protect its own prerogatives.

We are justified in our present confidence. Restoration of national income, which shows continuing gains for the third successive year, supports the normal and logical policies under which agriculture and industry are returning to full activity. Under these policies we approach a balance of the national budget. National income increases: Tax receipts, based on that income, increase without the levying of new taxes. That is why I am able to say to this, the second session of the seventy-fourth Congress, that based on existing laws it is my belief that no new taxes, over and above the present taxes, are advisable or necessary.

Reduction of Relief Costs.

National income increases: Employment increases. Therefore, we can look forward to a reduction in the number of those citizens who are in need. Therefore, also, we can anticipate a reduction in our appropriations for relief.

In the light of our substantial material progress, in the light of the increasing effectiveness of the restoration of popular rule, I recommend to the Congress that we advance; that we do not retreat. I have confidence tnat you will not fail the people of the nation whose mandate you have already so faithfully fulfilled.

I repeat, with the same faith and the same determination, my words of March 4th, 1933—"We face the arduous days that lie before us in the warm courage of national unity; with a clear consciousness of seeking old and precious moral values; with a clean satisfaction that comes from the stern performance of duty by old and young alike. We aim at the assurance of a rounded and permanent national life. We do not distrust the future of essential democracy."

I cannot better end this message on the State of the Union than by repeating the words of a wise philosopher at whose feet I sat many, many years ago:

"What great crises teach all men whom the example and counsel of the brave inspire is the lesson: Fear not, view all the task of life as sacred, have faith in the triumph of the ideal, give daily all that you have to give, be loyal and rejoice whenever you find yourselves part of a great ideal enterprise. You, at this moment, have the honor to belong to a generation whose lips are touched by fire. You live in a land that now enjoys the blessings of peace. But let nothing human be wholly alien to you. The human race now passes through one of its great crises. New ideas, new issues—a new call for men to carry on the work of righteousness, of charity, of courage, of patience, and of loyalty . . . However, memory brings back this moment to your minds, let it be able to say to you: "That was a great moment, It was the beginning of a new era....This world in its crisis called for volunteers, for men of faith in life, of patience in service, of charity and of insight. I responded to the call however I could. I volunteered to give myself to my master—the cause of humane and brave living. I studied, I loved, I labored, unsparingly and hopefully, to be worthy of my generation."

Roosevelt Tells Critics To Move Repeal of New Deal

His most definite statement regarding the budget was that with the "present confidence," "restoration of national income" and "the logical policies under which agriculture and industry are returning to full activity . . . we approach a balance of the national budget." With these same factors considered, he promised that "we can anticipate a reduction in our appropriation for relief."

He did not mention the amount of the appropriation he had in mind and he described the needy as "the several millions of unemployed citizens who face the very problem of existence." These subjects probably will be discussed in his budget message on Monday.

Without mentioning names of individuals or organizations, he denounced what he termed the forces of "entrenched greed" and declared that "they seek the restoration of their selfish power."

Assails "Business Minority."

The President's castigations seemingly were directed also at the United States Chamber of Commerce and the American Liberty League, particularly when he said:

"They steal the liberty of great national constitutional ideals to serve discredited special interests. As guardians and trustees of great groups of individual stockholders they wrongfully seek to carry the interests entrusted to them into the arena of partisan politics. They seek—this minority in business and politics—to control and often do control and use for their own purposes legitimate and highly-honored business associations; they engage in vast propaganda to spread fear and discord among the people —they would 'gang up' against the people's liberties."

This was a reference to a phrase recently used by Edward F. Hutton, former chairman of the General Foods Corporation, in an attack on the New Deal, published in a public utility magazine.

Challenge to Critics.

The President declared that if his critics believed his administration had hindered rather than prompted recovery the way was open for proposals to repeal the recovery and relief measures. Their dissent, he said, should no longer be hidden "in a cowardly cloak of generality." This challenge was delivered in the political part of the address.

"Let action be positive and not negative," he said. "The way is open in Congress for an expression of opinion by yeas and nays. Shall we say that values are restored and that Congress will, therefore, repeal the laws under which we have been bringing them back?"

He went on to enumerate other legislative enactments in similar manner.

Many of the New Deal laws mentioned by the President in his series of rhetorical questions are now under dispute in the courts. Declaring that the believers in "economic autocracy" were spreading fear among the people "subtly, expensively and cleverly," he said:

"I am confident that the Congress well understands the facts and is ready to wage unceasing warfare against those who seek a continuation of the spirit of fear. The carrying out of the laws of the land as enacted by the Congress requires protection until final adjudication by the highest tribunal of the land. The Congress has the right and can find the means to protect its own prerogatives."

Statement on Neutrality.

As was expected, a large part of the message was devoted to neutrality. The present temporary resolution will expire Feb. 29 and the Administration is eager to have permanent legislation as soon as possible.

With no direct mention of Hitler, Mussolini and the militaristic factions of Japan, the President put the responsibility for jeopardizing the peace of the world on the spirit of autocracy and aggression.

"Peace is jeopardized by the few and not by the many," he solemnly declared. "Peace is threatened by those who seek selfish power. The world has witnessed similar eras—as in the days when petty kings and feudal barons were changing the map of Europe every fortnight, or when great emperors and great kings were engaged in a mad scramble for coolnial empire.

"We hope that we are not again at the threshold of such an era. But if face it we must, then the United States and the rest of the Americas can play but one role: through a well ordered neutrality to do naught to encourage the contest, through adequate defense to save ourselves from embroilment and attack, and through example and all legitimate encouragement and assistance to persuade other nations to return to the ways of peace and good will."

EDITORIAL COMMENT IN NEWSPAPERS ON PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

New York Times: "Mr. Roosevelt's message to Congress was couched in vigorous language. His defense of his own administration was, as had been indicated in advance, a challenge to his political enemies and a rallying summons to his supporters. This was fully expected after his Atlanta speech, also in a fighting vein. But he gave first place and highest importance in his message to a discussion of war and peace. This is the part which will be read with keenest interest abroad, where, as he himself said, the positions which he laid down and the words which he used would not be 'popular.' . . . Mr. Roosevelt undertakes to define exactly the purposes and plans of American neutrality. These are, in brief, to be wholly impartial in the contest, yet to do everything within our power to discourage war and to prevent its prolongation. . . . Much in his message must await comment and is certain to provoke debate. But the grave and weighty words which he employs with regard to international affairs give to his address an importance which will be instantly recognized."

New York Herald Tribune — "It was a changed President who addressed the American people and incidentally Congress last night. The first half of his speech, devoted to the cause of world peace, ran smoothly enough through the expected inconsistencies. The second half, dealing with domestic problems, showed a strain of manner and a bitterness of phrase that plainly marked a new phase in Mr. Roosevelt's political career. The neutrality discussion was appropriate to the occasion and belonged in a message to Congress. The rest of the address made only an occasional pretense of being a report on the state of the nation and recommended no specific legislation. It was simply a political harangue, extraordinary chiefly for its heat and frankly demagogic appeal. The unconscious irony of the message lay in the sharp contrast between its devotion to peace abroad and its incitement to hatred at home. . . . If this extraordinary message truly represents Mr. Roosevelt's reaction to his loss of the country's support, a smiling President has been replaced by a bitter one who will omit no appeal to prejudice or selfishness or passion in his effort to stave off defeat."

Hartford (Conn.) Courant—"What the President gave was a stump speech designed less for the members of the Congress than for the country. It was just another of his fireside talks which needed only the salutation 'my friends' to make it thoroughly familiar. He dramatically chose the occasion and he fulfilled abundantly all the predictions as to the character of his address that were made the other day by Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National Committee."

Boston Globe—"He asserts his willingness to stand upon his own record and challenges those who oppose it to make their proposals definite. In doing this he seeks to carry the great majority of Congress with him. . . . The country has literally heard from the President. What Congressmen and Senators desire to know is how the voters feel about what they have heard."

Baltimore Sun—"Of the spirited candor with which the President denounced autocracy's threat to peace, we think the American people will be proud and grateful, and will hope that it may give moral strength and steadiness to those at other lands who face the dangers of war. Of the President's challenge to his foes at home, there must certainly be differences of opinion as to his logic, but very few of his dashing generalship. He gallops headlong in the van of his troops to meet the enemy, and he lifts high a sword whose keen edge none may deny."

Springfield (Mass.) Republican: "Anything but prosaic or fearsome in its ringing defiance of the opponents of his policies, the President's annual message concluded with a note of confidence in the substantial improvement of economic conditions. . . . In other respects, the message is that of a champion who has already stripped to fight a horde of enemies. It is an aggressive, at times caustic, reply to the National Manufacturers' Association, or Hearst, the du Ponts, American Liberty League and various organizations of private corporations in finance and utilities that have of late taken the field with the avowed purpose of destroying Roosevelt. The President combines the attributes of a constitutional executive and a political leader—the two roles are inseparable under our system of government. On this occasion he makes no pretense of hiding his political role."

Washington Star: "In the President's address, which was a masterpiece of words and excellently delivered, it was difficult to discern a recommendation, with the exception of a commendation to the Congress of American neutrality and a new law on that subject."

Cleveland Plain Dealer—"The nation would have welcomed a message with more detail. Mr. Roosevelt perhaps claims too much and admits too little. He offers more cheer for social idealists than for harassed taxpayers. However, the message is obviously the utterance of a man whose confidence is unshaken."

Cincinnati Times-Star—"The address was quite alien to Mr. Roosevelt's former manner in its intolerance and its violence of partisanship. It sounded as if Mr. Roosevelt had given up all notion of appealing to moderates and middle-of-the-roaders, and that he was out to please the radicals alone."

Louisville (Ky.) Times — "Skillfully, the President leads his audience from consideration of the evils of imperialism of States to evils of the same principles in domestic affairs...The President's defiance of 'our splendid economic autocracy,' now pitting its billions against him will be historic, regardless of the outcome of the 1936 campaign."

HOUSE COMMITTEE EXPECTED TO TAKE UP BONUS MONDAY

Newly Introduced Bill and Two Other Cash Payment Plans Before It for Consideration.

BYRNES TO SEEK SENATE VOTE FIRST

McNary Says He Favors Proposal If There Is No Inflation — Congress in Adjournment Today.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—With the controversial soldiers' bonus once more before it, Congress was in adjournment today after convening yesterday for the second session of its Seventy-fourth assembly and listening last night to President Roosevelt's annual message. The President ignored the issue in his address.

The House Ways and Means Committee was expected to take up Monday the new bonus bill, backed by veterans' organizations and introduced yesterday by Representatives Vinson (Dem.), Kentucky, and McCormack (Dem.), Massachusetts, shortly after Congress met. Chairman Doughton said he was in favor of "expediting" the measure, but would not predict definitely the time of action by his committee.

There was some sentiment in the Senate for taking up the bonus issue without waiting for the House to act.

Strong Democratic Support.

Strong support for full payment of the bonus appeared in Democratic ranks, and some backing among the minority was foreseen in a statement by Senator McNary, the Republican leader. McNary said he would vote for the proposal "so long as there is no inflation in it."

Administration leaders sought to hold enough votes to assure the kind of measure they believed the President might sign. The basis for negotiation was the Byrnes-Steiwer plan calling for 97 per cent cash payment, despite estimates that this proposal would cost $2,213,000,000, which is in excess of the cost estimated for the vetoed Patman plan. Some Democrats said they were confident he would not accept the Vinson-McCormack bill, which has the support of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans.

Senator Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, co-author of the proposal mentioned as a basis for a compromise that might gain administration approval, said he would "try to get action in the Senate first." Should the bill pass by a two-thirds vote, he said, it would show the House that a bill was at hand that could override a veto in event the President followed the precedent of last year and disapproved a bonus measure.

The Three Bonus Plans.

The three proposals on which the controversy centers are:

1. The veterans' bill, which would leave the financing method to the Treasury, and which the sponsoring organizations contend would cost only $1,000,000,000 immediately.

2. The Patman plan, under which new currency would be issued.

3. The Byrnes-Steiwer plan, which also would make the payment method discretionary with the administration. This plan provides for full payment, however, only in 1938. Immediate cashing would give only a 97 per cent return to the veteran.

The measure introduced yesterday would provide for immediate payment in full of the adjusted service certificates for the refund of interest on loans paid by veterans and for the cancelation of unpaid interest on veterans' loans. It moves up the maturity date from 1945 to April 6, 1937.

Payment would be made in full to veterans applying up to that date exactly 20 years from entry into the war. Those applying after that date would receive, up to 1945, payment plus interest at 3 per cent over the period beginning with the bill's enactment.

The Secretary of the Treasury would be authorized to make payment of the loans made by the United States Government life insurance fund on the service certificates by issuing to the insurance fund Federal bonds bearing 3½ per cent interest.

C. of C. Opposes Any Cash Plan.

Introduction of the measure was followed by criticism of all cash plus measures from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which said in a statement that "payment of the bonus means increased debt, increased taxes or printing press money."

The Chamber predicted that it would require about $1,277,000,000 more than Congress has estimated to pay the World War veterans' bonus. It said in a formal statement that "while the credit of the Government is still good, there are distinct limits to the amounts which it can safely borrow."

SPEECH ASSAILED AND DEFENDED BY PARTY LEADERS

willing to submit a thing to a Congress controlled by a three-to-one vote. It was just cheap, political claptrap."

Senator Johnson, California: "A bully speech."

Senator Couzens, Michigan: "It was a great speech, and if there was anything I liked best it was 'no retreat.'"

Representative Eaton, New Jersey, former clergyman who criticised the President's letter asking for advice of churchmen: "After listening to the President, I am like the old lady who went to church to hear a sermon proving the existence of God. When she came out, she said she still believed in God. After listening to the President on 'the state of the Union,' I still believe in the Union."

Democrats' Comment.

Senator Harrison, Mississippi: "It brought vividly to life what the American people know is true."

Senator Pittman, Nevada: "He has laid down the issues himself, rather than allowed the opposition to prescribe the battleground."

Senator Costigan, Colorado: "The New Deal and the square deal in one."

Senator Gore, Oklahoma: "He declared for peace, prevention of war and balancing the budget, with which I agree wholeheartedly."

Senator Thomas, Oklahoma: "He gave a clear portrayal of our last three years and the basis of the Democratic party's campaign. It's our campaign and what we are going before the country on."

Senator Byrnes, South Carolina: "The President has met the challenge of the people who have determined to make war on this administration."

Senator Thomas, Utah: "If they wanted politics, they got it. But at the same time that speech will go down as one of the greatest state papers ever delivered."

Senator Bankhead, Alabama: "I think it was full of fighting spirit on a high ground."

Speaker Byrns: "It very clearly sets forth the major issues of the coming campaign."

Senator Neely, West Virginia: "A more stirring and courageous call to battle for the rights of the common people has never been heard on Capitol Hill."

Representative Sabath, Illinois: "A most courageous, most admirable speech. He has not retreated as some thought he would in trying to pacify some of the interests."

50 Earth Tremors at Niland, Cal.

NILAND, Cal., Jan. 4.—More than 50 slight earthquakes, cracking plaster and breaking a few windows, have shaken this area of Imperial Valley in the past two weeks. Four minor shocks were felt yesterday. The hardest of the series came New Year's day, residents said.

"in a cowardly cloak of generality." This challenge was delivered in the political part of the address.

"Let action be positive and not negative," he said. "The way is open in Congress for an expression of opinion by yeas and nays. Shall we say that values are restored and that Congress will, therefore, repeal the laws under which we have been bringing them back?"

He went on to enumerate other legislative enactments in similar manner.

Many of the New Deal laws mentioned by the President in his series of rhetorical questions are now under dispute in the courts. Declaring that the believers in "economic autocracy" were spreading fear among the people "subtly, expensively and cleverly," he said:

"I am confident that the Congress well understands the facts and is ready to wage unceasing warfare against those who seek a continuation of the spirit of fear. The carrying out of the laws of the land as enacted by the Congress requires protection until final adjudication by the highest tribunal of the land. The Congress has the right and can find the means to protect its own prerogatives."

Statement on Neutrality.

As was expected, a large part of the message was devoted to neutrality. The present temporary resolution will expire Feb. 29 and the Administration is eager to have permanent legislation as soon as possible.

With no direct mention of Hitler, Mussolini and the militaristic factions of Japan, the President put the responsibility for jeopardizing the peace of the world on the spirit of autocracy and aggression.

"Peace is jeopardized by the few and not by the many," he solemnly declared. "Peace is threatened by those who seek selfish power. The world has witnessed similar eras as in the days when petty kings and feudal barons were changing the map of Europe every fortnight, or when great emperors and great kings were engaged in a mad scramble for coolnial empire.

"We hope that we are not again at the threshold of such an era. But if face it we must, then the United States and the rest of the Americas can play but one role: through a well ordered neutrality to do naught to encourage the contest, through adequate defense to save ourselves from embroilment and attack, and through example and all legitimate encouragement and assistance to persuade other nations to return to the ways of peace and good will."

willingness to stand upon his own record and challenges those who oppose it to make their proposals definite. In doing this he seeks to carry the great majority of Congress with him. . . . The country has literally heard from the President. What Congressmen and Senators desire to know is how the voters feel about what they have heard."

Baltimore Sun—"Of the spirited candor with which the President denounced autocracy's threat to peace, we think the American people will be proud and grateful, and will hope that it may give moral strength and steadiness to those of other lands who face the dangers of war. Of the President's challenge to his foes at home, there must certainly be differences of opinion as to his logic, but very few of his dashing generalship. He gallops headlong in the van of his troops to meet the enemy, and he lifts high a sword whose keen edge none may deny."

Springfield (Mass.) Republican: "Anything but prosaic or fearsome in its ringing defiance of the opponents of his policies, the President's annual message concluded with a note of confidence in the substantial improvement of economic conditions. . . . In other respects, the message is that of a champion who has already stripped to fight a horde of enemies. It is an aggressive, at times caustic, reply to the National Manufacturers' Association, or Hearst, the du Ponts, American Liberty League and various organizations of private corporations in finance and utilities that have of late taken the field with the avowed purpose of destroying Roosevelt. The President combines the attributes of a constitutional executive and a political leader—the two roles are inseparable under our system of government. On this occasion he makes no pretense of hiding his political role."

Washington Star: "In the President's address, which was a masterpiece of words and excellently delivered, it was difficult to discern a recommendation, with the exception of a commendation to the Congress of American neutrality and a new law on that subject."

Cleveland Plain Dealer—"The nation would have welcomed a message with more detail. Mr. Roosevelt perhaps claims too much and admits too little. He offers more cheer for social idealists than for harassed taxpayers. However, the message is obviously the utterance of a man whose confidence is unshaken."

Cincinnati Times-Star—"The address was quite alien to Mr. Roosevelt's former manner in its intolerance and its violence of partisanship. It sounded as if Mr. Roosevelt had given up all notion of appealing to moderates and middle-of-the-roaders, and that he was out to please the radicals alone."

Louisville (Ky.) Times — "Skillfully, the President leads his audience from consideration of the evils of imperialism of States to evils of the same principles in domestic affairs...The President's defiance of 'our splendid economic autocracy,' now pitting its billions against him will be historic, regardless of the outcome of the 19... campaign."

HOUSE COMMITTEE EXPECTED TO TAKE UP BONUS MONDAY

Newly Introduced Bill and Two Other Cash Payment Plans Before It for Consideration.

BYRNES TO SEEK SENATE VOTE FIRST

McNary Says He Favors Proposal If There Is No Inflation — Congress in Adjournment Today.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—With the controversial soldiers' bonus once more before it, Congress was in adjournment today after convening yesterday for the second session of its Seventy-fourth assembly and listening last night to President Roosevelt's annual message. The President ignored the issue in his address.

The House Ways and Means Committee was expected to take up Monday the new bonus bill, backed by veterans' organizations and introduced yesterday by Representatives Vinson (Dem.), Kentucky, and McCormack (Dem.), Massachusetts, shortly after Congress met. Chairman Doughton said he was in favor of "expediting" the measure, but would not predict definitely the time of action by his committee.

There was some sentiment in the Senate for taking up the bonus issue without waiting for the House to act.

Strong Democratic Support.

Strong support for full payment of the bonus appeared in Democratic ranks, and some backing among the minority was foreseen in a statement by Senator McNary, the Republican leader. McNary said he would vote for the proposal "so long as there is no inflation in it."

Administration leaders sought to hold enough votes to assure the kind of measure they believed the President might sign. The basis for negotiation was the Byrnes-Steiwer plan calling for 97 per cent cash payment, despite estimates that this proposal would cost $2,213,000,000, which is in excess of the cost estimated for the vetoed Patman plan. Some Democrats said they were confident he would not accept the Vinson-McCormack bill, which has the support of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans.

Senator Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, co-author of the proposal mentioned as a basis for a compromise that might gain administration approval, said he would "try to get action in the Senate first." Should the bill pass by a two-thirds vote, he said, it would show the House that a bill was at hand that could override a veto in event the President followed the precedent of last year and disapproved a bonus measure.

The Three Bonus Plans.

The three proposals on which the controversy centers are:

1. The veterans' bill, which would leave the financing method to the Treasury, and which the sponsoring organizations contend would cost only $1,000,000,000 immediately.

2. The Patman plan, under which new currency would be issued.

3. The Byrnes-Steiwer plan, which also would make the payment method discretionary with the administration. This plan provides for full payment, however, only in 1938. Immediate cashing would give only a 97 per cent return to the veteran.

The measure introduced yesterday would provide for immediate payment in full of the adjusted service certificates for the refund of interest on loans paid by veterans and for the cancelation of unpaid interest on veterans' loans. It moves up the maturity date from 1945 to April 6, 1937.

Payment would be made in full to veterans applying up to that date exactly 20 years from entry into the war. Those applying after that date would receive, up to 1945, payment plus interest at 3 per cent over the period beginning with the bill's enactment.

The Secretary of the Treasury would be authorized to make payment of the loans made by the United States Government life insurance fund on the service certificates by issuing to the insurance fund Federal bonds bearing 3½ per cent interest.

C. of C. Opposes Any Cash Plan.

Introduction of the measure was followed by criticism of all cash bonus measures from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which said in a statement that "payment of the bonus means increased debt, increased taxes or printing press money."

The Chamber predicted that it would require about $1,277,000,000 more than Congress has estimated to pay the World War veterans' bonus. It said in a formal statement that "while the credit of the Government is still good, there are distinct limits to the amounts which it can safely borrow."

EUROPEAN COMMENT ON ROOSEVELT SPEECH

British Think League Sanctions Would Follow U. S. Quota on Oil.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The British public in great numbers tuned in and listened to President Roosevelt's annual message to Congress. Throughout the British Isles, many sat up until 2 a. m. to hear the voice of the American President, broadcast across the Atlantic.

Particular interest centered on Roosevelt's references to foreign policy, outlining a two-fold neutrality program—to bar American arms and ammunition to belligerents, and to hold to normal peacetime exports the shipments to warring nations of all American products entering into conduct of war.

If the United States so curtailed its shipments to Italy of oil, as an essential material for war-making, it was generally recognized, the League of Nations—the Council, or executive body of which meets in mid-January—scarcely could hesitate longer.

Should the United States restrict its oil exports, the Laborite Daily Herald said, "an oil embargo becomes a certain means of stopping the Ethiopian war."

"Should the League Powers refuse to use similar means, they would be deliberately allowing continuation of the conflict," the newspaper added.

The Star said President Roosevelt "is bringing the United States with him in a challenge to dictators which they will ignore at their peril."

"Mussolini is for his brand of civilization by the way of bombing Red Cross hospitals, the use of poison gas and general frightfulness.

"Roosevelt is for civilization by the way of civilization.

"The two views are irreconcilable. With Roosevelt and the United States on the right side, there can be little doubt of the final outcome."

French Say Roosevelt's Address May Increase War Preparations.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—President Roosevelt's message to Congress was criticised by some as possibly increasing, instead of hindering, European war preparations.

Roosevelt's declarations generally were regarded as heightening isolation of the United States, with a likelihood that his policy would result in other nations developing their own resources in peace to a standard of self-sufficiency for war.

"Roosevelt wants to put the brake on wars," the Paris Midi says. "In refusing to distinguish between the aggressor and the victim, he perhaps excites preparation for future war. He means to restore a blockade—he provokes autocracy. He is breaking the slender bond linking America to the rest of the world."

Officials said they considered Roosevelt's speech "courageous." High quarters indicated pleasure that the President spoke out against dictators, especially because of France's animosity toward Hitler.

One authoritative source said the message was "a definite step for peace and democracy, which should go far toward assuring world peace."

Vladimir Dormesson, commentator for conservative Figaro, said Roosevelt, without obtaining peace, removes responsibility from himself.

The American concept of neutrality, this commentator said, would mean that if Germany invaded "Belgium or France or any other country, the strong and the weak, the innocent and the guilty, would all be treated alike."

Japanese Press Stresses Neutrality Policy Set Forth in Message.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Jan. 4.—Japanese newspapers gave prominence to President Roosevelt's address to Congress in bold, but non-committal headlines. Only the Asahi headlined reference to a few trouble-making Powers.

The newspaper Vomiuri, in an editorial headline, expressed the opinion that the address displayed concern over the North China and East African situations, but the majority of newspapers stressed the President's passages outlining the United States policy for neutrality rather than those referring to recognition of "growing ill-will * * * trends * * * that lead to the tragedy of general war."

Official comment was not immediately available, authorities being absent on their New Year holidays.

German Officials Think References to Autocracies Means Italy, Japan.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—Excerpts from President Roosevelt's message were prominently displayed in Berlin newspapers today, with emphasis on what was interpreted as "the end of dollar diplomacy."

Although officials have made no public comment, opinions heard in high circles were that the mutual desire of Germany and the United States to "keep out of war" was resulting in similar neutrality policies.

Roosevelt's references to autocratic governments were assumed to apply to Italy and Japan, whose armies are operating actively.

CHICAGO DOCTOR GETS FALSE CALL AND IS MURDERED

Found Shot in Automobile Near Supposed Destination — 9 Knife Wounds Encircle Head.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Dr. Silber C. Peacock, 40 years old, a pediatrician, was found murdered last night in his automobile less than 24 hours after he was lured from his home, three miles away, by a telephone call from someone who asked him to attend "a sick child."

An overcoat covered the body on the floor in the back of his car. Instruments of his case were scattered and there were other signs of a hard struggle.

Coroner's physicians reported today that death was caused by a pistol bullet wound in the forehead. They also said nine knife wounds encircled the head, as though an attempt had been made to scalp the doctor.

Wife's Story of Call.

Mrs. Ruth Peacock, the doctor's wife, told police that her husband was preparing to go to bed at 10 p. m. when the telephone rang. She said she heard him remark, "Oh, a sick child," as he scribbled "6438 North Whipple street" and "Z. Smale" on a desk pad. He then dressed hurriedly and drove off in his sedan. His body was found a short distance from his supposed destination.

Miss Edith Cecil, a maid employed in the neighborhood, told the police she saw two persons arguing heatedly in the automobile at 1:30 a. m. Friday.

A Coroner's jury heard brief testimony from Mrs. Peacock and then adjourned until Jan. 21. Mrs. Peacock said she was not certain whether a man or a woman telephoned.

In addition to trying to find a trace of the person that Mrs. Peacock said telephoned, police sought a man as a result of a story told by Mrs. Peacock today.

Visited by Angry Man.

She said an angry man entered her husband's offices three months ago and charged that Dr. Peacock had performed an illegal operation on the caller's wife. Dr. Peacock's secretary, Miss Kathryne Maloney, said he ordered the man out of his office, after attempting to explain he treated no patients but children. Dr. Peacock was upset by the incident, Miss Maloney said and explained:

"That silly fellow accuses me of performing an illegal operation upon his wife."

Police questioning of the doctor's secretary and his friends indicated the physician's life was one of quiet and conventional pattern. Mrs. Peacock said he was a man of regular habits, and rarely made night calls.

His wife and a daughter, 6, survive him.

NEW LABELING REGULATIONS FOR AMERICAN WINE-MAKERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—American winemakers may not label their product "champagne" unless they so qualify the label as to distinguish their product from that of the champagne district of France.

Under regulations announced by the Federal Alcohol Administration, the single word "champagne" is reserved to the producers of the champagne district of France. American vintners, who follow the French process may call their product "American champagne," "New York champagne," or "California champagne." Sparkling wine made without using the French process of secondary fermentation in the bottle must be labeled with some title like "Sparkling wine-champagne type," or "sparkling wine-American champagne—bulk process."

The FACA announced the new designations, "light port" and "light sherry" for labeling purposes. The word "light" must appear with the words "port" and "sherry" when the port is less than 18 per cent alcohol, and the sherry 17 per cent. The new regulations are effective March 1.

ICKES DENOUNCES CRITICS OF NEW TAX LEGISLATION

Accuses Them of Advocating "Soak the Poor" Program Built on Levyq on Sales.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes today accused critics of the Roosevelt administration's tax legislation of advocating a "soak-the-poor" program.

"Our multi-millionaires want the surtaxes on great incomes reduced or even abolished and sales taxes imposed in their steady," he said in a speech to the Rochester City Club. "Now everyone capable of honest thinking knows that a sales tax is a graduated income tax in reverse. It bears most heavily upon those least able to pay."

Ickes, Public Works Administrator, said taxation should be in proportion to ability to pay and according to benefits received from the Government.

"To my utter distress," he said, "I read in certain newspapers that this is all wrong. Sitting humbly at the feet of such master economists and disinterested citizens as William Randolph Hearst and Col. Robert R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, I am doing my best to unlearn what I was taught in my impressionable youth." The new theory, he said, is to make the "under-incomed pay and pay and pay for the Government which the rich and prosperous have arrogantly come to regard as peculiarly their own."

CITY APPLIES FOR $3,300,000 FOR RIVER-FRONT MEMORIAL

Requests for WPA Funds Are Forwarded to Washington by Mayor Dickmann.

Applications for $3,300,000 of WPA funds for work on the proposed river-front memorial to Thomas Jefferson and the development of the West were sent to Washington yesterday by Mayor Dickmann. President Roosevelt last month issued an order allotting public works funds for the memorial. The applications estimated that 8000 persons could be employed for varying periods.

One requested $1,525,543 for removal of the several hundred buildings from the 37-block site. A second asked $728,308 for extensive retaining walls along the levee, from Washington avenue to Poplar street, necessary in connection with the change of grade from the present steep slope to a level. The third sought $1,046,149 for grading and landscaping the site and building roadways and approaches, including widening of Third street, the western border, to 120 feet.

BELLEVILLE STOVE ENAMELERS VOTE TO CONTINUE STRIKE

500 Workers, Out Since Thursday, Are Demanding 15 Pct. Wage Increase.

About 500 union stove enamel workers in three Belleville plants, who have remained away from work since Thursday following refusal of the companies to grant a 15 per cent wage increase, voted last night to continue the strike until their demand is met.

The enamelers rejected a 5 per cent increase which became effective for all stove foundry employes Jan. 1, following an agreement several weeks ago. The present wage scale, according to a company representative, is 52¼ cents an hour to 60½ cents.

Plants affected are the Roesch Enamel Range Co., Peerless Enameling Co. and Baker-Nagle Stove Co. All factories were closed during the holidays and reopened Thursday.

UNION OFFICER'S WIFE MURDERED IN CHICAGO

Shots Fired Into Auto at Husband Kill Mrs. Elsie Henneman.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Elsie Henneman, 35 years old, was shot and killed last night by gunmen who, police think, attempted to assasinate her husband, George Henneman, secretary and treasurer of the painters' union.

She was riding in an automobile with her husband when two men forced the car to the curb. Henneman said one of the men opened fire with a shot gun.

James Dugan, business agent of the union, was held for questioning.

Henneman escaped by sliding to the floor of his car. Today he said, "I don't want to talk. I'm afraid of being shot."

"Mrs. Henneman was shot by accident, but the shooting was the direct outcome of the war for control of the union among several of its factions," declared Assistant State's Attorney William Brumlik.

Police records showed Dugan, the business agent, was chased several miles in 1934 by three machine-gunners who fired 50 shots at him, that Roy Thompson, another union officer, was shot to death, and Michael Quinlan, said by police to have tried to "muscle" into the union, was killed about the same time.

Henneman left a union meeting shortly before last night's shooting. He drove Dugan's car.

FORMER STATE VETERINARIAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY OF FRAUD

Dr. D. F. Luckey, One of 10 Under Federal Charges, Denies Plot to Resell AAA Cattle.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 4.—Dr. D. F. Luckey, former Missouri State veterinarian, pleaded not guilty yesterday to Federal charges of conspiring to defraud the Government through repetitious sale of cattle condemned under the AAA drouth-purchase program.

Four cattlemen of Texas County, Missouri, were held in jail at Springfield, Mo., where a grand jury indicted 10 persons.

"The Government provided no pens for condemned cattle," Dr. Luckey said. "I was obliged to impose on people to provide a place. Very few were left in these pens overnight. So far as I could dispose of carcasses, all condemned cattle were shot during the day.

"If all the condemned cattle had been taken out and then brought back and resold they would have brought about $8000. If any condemned cattle were stolen out of the pens at night and resold, the number would have been very small."

Watchman Beaten and Robbed.

Lawson, 4559 Swan avenue, a watchman for the Missouri Pacific Railroad, was beaten and robbed of $27 by a man who accosted him at 5 o'clock this morning as he was walking under the Kingshighway viaduct on his way to work. He was taken to Missouri Pacific Hospital suffering from a fractured right jaw and lacerations. The watchman said his assailant stepped from behind a pillar, knocked him down with a weapon which he was unable to describe and dragged him under the viaduct. After taking the money, the robber fled in an automobile which Lawson thought was driven by a companion.

WOMAN WITH $30,000 DIES OF STARVATION

Brother-in-Law in Bed Unable to Get Food in Kitchen of Home.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—With more than $30,000 in the bank and plenty of food nearby, Mrs. Anna Cloutier, 60 years old, was found dead of starvation yesterday in her three-story home in the Bronx. She had been dead at least three days.

In an adjoining room, unable to leave his bed, her brother-in-law, Amedee Cloutier, 60, was found near death from starvation.

Neighbors had called police after water from brust pipes in the basement of the house began flowing into basements on either side. The house was shabby and bare and showed no sign of ever having been heated this winter. Police, however, found 14 bankbooks showing deposits of more than $30,000 with no withdrawals. One of the bankbooks was Cloutier's. The others were his sister-in-law's. Bureau drawers yielded about 50 pieces of old jewelry, including rings, pins, bracelets and eight or 10 watches, all of considerable value.

Tax receipts showed the Cloutiers had owned the house since 1889. They kept to themselves and never talked about their affairs. Mrs. Cloutier's husband died about 15 years ago,and her son, a World War aviator, died about the same time.

It is thought that during the cold wave early this week both the woman and her brother-in-law became ill and neither was able to help the other.

There was a supply of bread, meat and milk in the kitchen but apparently neither was strong enough to reach it.

Lawyers and Lay Services.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

NO one will disagree with the conclusion announced in your recent editorial that practice of the law be strictly limited to lawyers. The protection of the public demands nothing short of that. What you overlook is that the effort of the bar to suppress what it terms the unauthorized practice of the law is in large part an effort to enlarge the definition of what such practice is.

In Missouri, for example, it has been publicly announced by spokesmen of the bar that they desire to raise a fund of $15,000 to "investigate" the casualty insurance business. That business employs lay adjusters, whose functions among other things are to gather the facts respecting accidents and obtain written statements of witnesses. In some instances, where the facts are uncomplicated, the adjusters settle the claims. If that work is restricted to lawyers, the cost of doing it will be enormously increased; the bill will be paid by the policyholders. The matter is of interest to those who must pay the bill.

If you will consult the statutes of your own State, you will find that your Legislature has defined the practice of the law. Read that definition. Give the words their ordinary meaning and you will find that, fairly interpreted, every real estate agent is practicing law, every bank presenting a draft for one of its customers is practicing law; every salesman filling in blanks on an order, for commission for making a sale, is practicing law. You will bear in mind that in large part lawyers make the laws; they interpret the laws. Under the stress of diminishing incomes, lawyers throughout the United States are engaged in a major effort to add to the definition of what the practice of the law is. For years lawyers, in the main, have steadfastly recognized theirs was not a money-making enterprise. The depth and severity of the depression alone account for the fact that, driven by sheer necessity, attorneys have determined to "move in" on callings which for 100 years have been completely handled by laymen.

The campaign of the bar is a direct attack upon the progress of arbitration of business disputes, upon the important functions of conciliators in almost every line of business whose work is to compose disputes and prevent lawsuits. These businesses have saved over-burdened courts much labor; by reducing the lawyers' fees and heavy expenses of litigation, they have enabled insurance firms and business firms to serve the people economically. As men learn that litigation is expensive and unfruitful, they adopt expedients to obviate it.

But if the lawyers have their way, it will take a Harvard professor to advise the average man when he needs a lawyer or when he may safely entrust an everyday job to a layman.

When men who have grown gray in the rendering of certain kinds of service are summarily told that unless they are lawyers they may not continue to render it—when those services have been rendered by laymen for from 50 to 100 years to the satisfaction of the general public, then it is time for all men to unite to protect themselves from the grasping, greedy hand of the law.

Recalling the State Motto.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

FOR the enlightenment of those in political power in this illustrious State, who are possibly in ignorance of its motto, I wish to quote same: "Salus populi suprema lex esto," meaning: "Let the welfare of the people be the supreme law."

It would be well for some of them to abide by it. CITIZEN.

Would Tax the Smoke.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE have heard numerous suggestions about St. Louis smoke, but it seems to get us no further than similar remarks about the weather. Of course, we have had some grandiose schemes of laying gas lines to Texas and constructing municipal coking plants, but they require considerable time, effort and finance.

There is a really workable plan requiring no huge investment; it is simply this: tax the one who makes the smoke. Ah! A chorus of complaints. Never mind, reader. Every heating plant in the city, public or private, should be inspected and taxed on the basis of $1 a year for each rated 100 square feet of radiation, and exemptions from the tax should be given to all heating plants with approved smokeless firing devices—oil burners, stokers, gas burners or electric devices, or any other means that may be developed.

Result: An overwhelming desire on the part of everyone to escape the tax; a financial incentive for the burner salesman to use in his arguments; no discrimination against any group of fuel suppliers; a temporary income for the city—temporary because we shall tire of paying this tax year after year.

We have a boiler inspector and a smoke inspector, with an organization all ready to go; and we have white-collar unemployed who would be eager to work in the initial survey.

Later, we should insist that all new buildings submit their plans for approval on heating plants. SMOKY.

"THE STATE OF THE UNION."

He (the President) shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.

This is the constitutional mandate under which President Roosevelt went before a joint meeting of the House and Senate last night, on the opening day of the new congressional session, and delivered a stump speech.

He used the occasion as the sounding board for a partisan political attack. So doing, he not only took an improper advantage of the prerogatives of his office but failed in regard for the dignity of the presidency and the dignity that should attach to a joint session called to hear the President. He was guilty, moreover, of poor sportsmanship. None of the opponents of the President can hope to speak under auspices even remotely comparable to those which enabled Mr. Roosevelt, by virtue of his office, to address a political appeal to millions of radio listeners in the guise of a report to Congress on "the state of the Union."

The whole business, from the unprecedented fixing of a night hour for the speech, with the obvious purpose of increasing the size of the radio audience, down to the character of most of the speech itself, was an unpleasant piece of showmanship. It is hard to see how it can do the President any political good. It was too clever.

So long as the President reported on the state of the world, as he did in his important opening remarks, his speech fully comported with the dignity and the duties of his office, though one could wish that he had pictured the American scene with somewhat less of provocative smugness. He gave a realistic and vivid account of the troubles abroad, spoke with taste and tact of our good relations with Canada and the other nations of the Western Hemisphere, and laid down the broad outlines of his neutrality policy.

So far so good. When he began to report on the "state of the Union," his address became the political oration of a candidate for office, with more than a trace of demagoguery. The speech from that point on was a generalized eulogy of the accomplishments of the New Deal (nothing about the NRA) and a generalized attack on its opponents. In a political speech, labeled as such and under appropriate auspices, the President's challenge to his opponents to produce a specific program would have been a fair thrust; last night it was part of a political onslaught that had no proper place in a state paper.

The President himself, in the field of domestic affairs, gave Congress only the scantiest guidance as to measures "necessary and expedient." He said he believed that no new taxes were advisable or necessary, and he felt that we could "anticipate a reduction in our appropriations for relief." These were the only statements that could be classed as specific recommendations. He recommended also "that we advance; that we do not retreat." That can cover anything, or nothing.

When the President, ending his address, referred to "this message on the state of the Union," a raucous laugh came over the air from a section of his congressional audience. As the saying goes, he asked for it.

DIAGNOSIS.

Said Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, Thursday night before the American Association for the Advancement of Science:

> The efficient functioning of the economic system requires a broader dissemination of income among the masses of the people. Growth in the economic organism as in other organisms must proceed from the broadest possible foundations.
>
> We cannot expect to realize the benefits of mass production except in an economy of mass consumption. Back of each new unit of productive power there must be, if the economic system is to function effectively, a new unit of purchasing power for the goods which such productive capacity can supply. Only thus can the economic system be kept in balance.

It has all been said before, but not often so clearly and compactly as in these paragraphs.

So Al Smith declines an invitation to the White House. Hasn't the brown derby gone high hat?

THE POSTAL SURPLUS.

Every announcement of a Postoffice Department surplus is greeted with ridicule and charges of deception. The interests of accuracy and fair play demand that each such outburst be answered by explanation of the postal accounting system, so that lagging truth may catch up with fleet-footed misrepresentation.

It is true that the department last year had a gross deficit of $65,807,951 if one considers only the $630,795,302 receipts and the $696,603,253 expenditures. There are certain items of non-postal costs, however, that must be subtracted from the expense column, both for the sake of logic and to comply with the law of June 9, 1930, in determining the department's actual fiscal position. These special costs were:

Government mail	$31,281,600
Congressional mail	577,342
Newspapers delivered free in county of publication	575,342
Special rates to fraternal, religious, etc., publications	335,134
Air mail subsidy	8,474,738
Ocean mail subsidy	28,292,841
Total	$69,536,997

These are clearly not items of cost incurred in operating the Postoffice Department. Free delivery of Government and congressional mail are properly chargeable to the departments concerned. Subsidies to air and ocean mail are in line with developing aviation and merchant marine service, and therefore chargeable to the military departments. Special rates to religious, fraternal, scientific and cultural publications and to newspapers in their home counties are in fulfillment of governmental policies, of no bearing on the department's business. When these items, and others in the same category, are deducted, there remains a net surplus of $4,964,149—a genuine surplus from actual postal operations.

It was a smaller net surplus than the previous year's because postal workers' pay was restored to former levels, certainly the best possible use of the money. Much of the current year's expected surplus is being used in the additional employment made possible by the adoption of the 40-hour week.

Mr. Farley's critics adopt a false premise when they criticise his announcement of a surplus. They would be on solid ground if they confined their attack to the spoils system in his department. Under complete civil service, with the heightened efficiency that this would bring, we could confidently expect bigger surpluses as well as better postal service.

IF THE BONUS, WHY NOT BABY BONDS?

It seems a foregone conclusion that a bill for immediate cash payment of the soldier bonus will be passed at the present session of Congress. It will probably be along the lines of the "compromise" bill, backed by the veterans' organizations, introduced on the opening day. This bill provides for immediate payment of adjusted service certificates, issued to mature in 1945, for refund of interest on loans on certificates and, for veterans who do not desire payment now, 3 per cent interest until 1945 on the full amount due.

It won't happen, of course, but passage of such a bill would set a precedent that holders of Baby Bonds might use if they become impatient and decide they want payment of the bonds' face value now instead of waiting 10 years. The holder of a $25 bond paid $18.75, which at 2.9 per cent interest for 10 years will amount to the face value. The value of veterans' certificates is reckoned similarly. In fact, they are virtually 20-year endowment insurance policies. Full payment now would mean payment of interest not yet earned. Payment of an additional 3 per cent annually to veterans who wait until 1945 means payment of double interest.

The owners of Baby Bonds have no organized lobby, and no patriotic appeal, but they too might argue that immediate payment would put money in circulation. They could point out that the generosity of Congress with unearned interest and Federal funds should not be confined to one group of Government creditors.

CENSURE FOR THE U. OF PITTSBURGH.

The removal of the University of Pittsburgh from the eligible list of the American Association of University Professors comes as no surprise. After the report of an investigating committee of the organization last March, the blacklisting was inevitable. As reported by Prof. Ralph E. Himstead of Syracuse University: "The almost universal testimony of 100 (Pittsburgh) professors interviewed by the committee was that an atmosphere of fear, intimidation and suspicion surrounds the faculty. Not only was there suppression of academic expression on social and economic issues, but freedom of speech about administration of ordinary university affairs has been suppressed."

This generalization is substantiated by the evidence. At the end of his first year, Chancellor John G. Bowman called for the resignation of 53 professors. The dismissal of Ralph E. Turner on a charge of irreligion, which prompted an inquiry by the Pennsylvania Legislature and led Gov. Earle to demand academic freedom at the institution if it were to continue to receive public support, was only one of many such ousters. Altogether, conditions at the institution have been scarcely credible.

Given the freedom to follow where the lamp of learning lights the way, Pittsburgh's Gothic skyscraper can be a university worthy of the name. The censure of the American Association of University Professors looks to that better day.

MOTOR MIRACLE

If the automobile told its story in the first person, it would have to borrow a Gargantuan ego. It is that big. Its output for 1935 is estimated at 4,150,000 vehicles. The magnitude of the figures can be appreciated only by a statistical survey of mines and smelters, forests and fields.

Iron and steel, zinc, lead, aluminum, copper, nickel and tin—it has gobbled down vast mouthfuls of them all. It absorbed three-fourths of all the rubber and a larger proportion of plate glass. It consumed 210,000,000 pounds of cotton fabric. In the absence of any remarks about paint, it is permissible, we suppose, to filch Brother Kipling's "Ten-league canvas, with brushes of comet's hair."

Leaving the assembly lines and observing the cars in operation, we are confronted with 16,150,000,000 gallons of gasoline, ladled out at 320,000 filling stations. In dollars—prices and taxes—that item reached the tidy sum of $3,250,000,000, with an addition 10 million dollars for good measure. Railroads, by the way, handled 3,422,000 carloads of automotive freight.

The year registered an all-time high of 3,550,000 commercial units, and passenger cars rose to 22,450,000, giving the United States 71 per cent of all the cars and trucks in the world.

The record is accounted for in part by the experiment of introducing the new models in the fall, instead of after the first of the year. This departure from traditional policy was undertaken with some misgivings, notwithstanding the numerous considerations that urged it. It stimulated the usually quiescent market of November and December, though the effect on spring sales is yet to be encountered.

Anyhow, the automobile continues to be the miracle member of the industrial family.

Speeding motorists won't like the black-and-white 1936 Missouri automobile licenses. The plates, viewed in the driver's mirror, are hard to distinguish from the permanent tags on police cars.

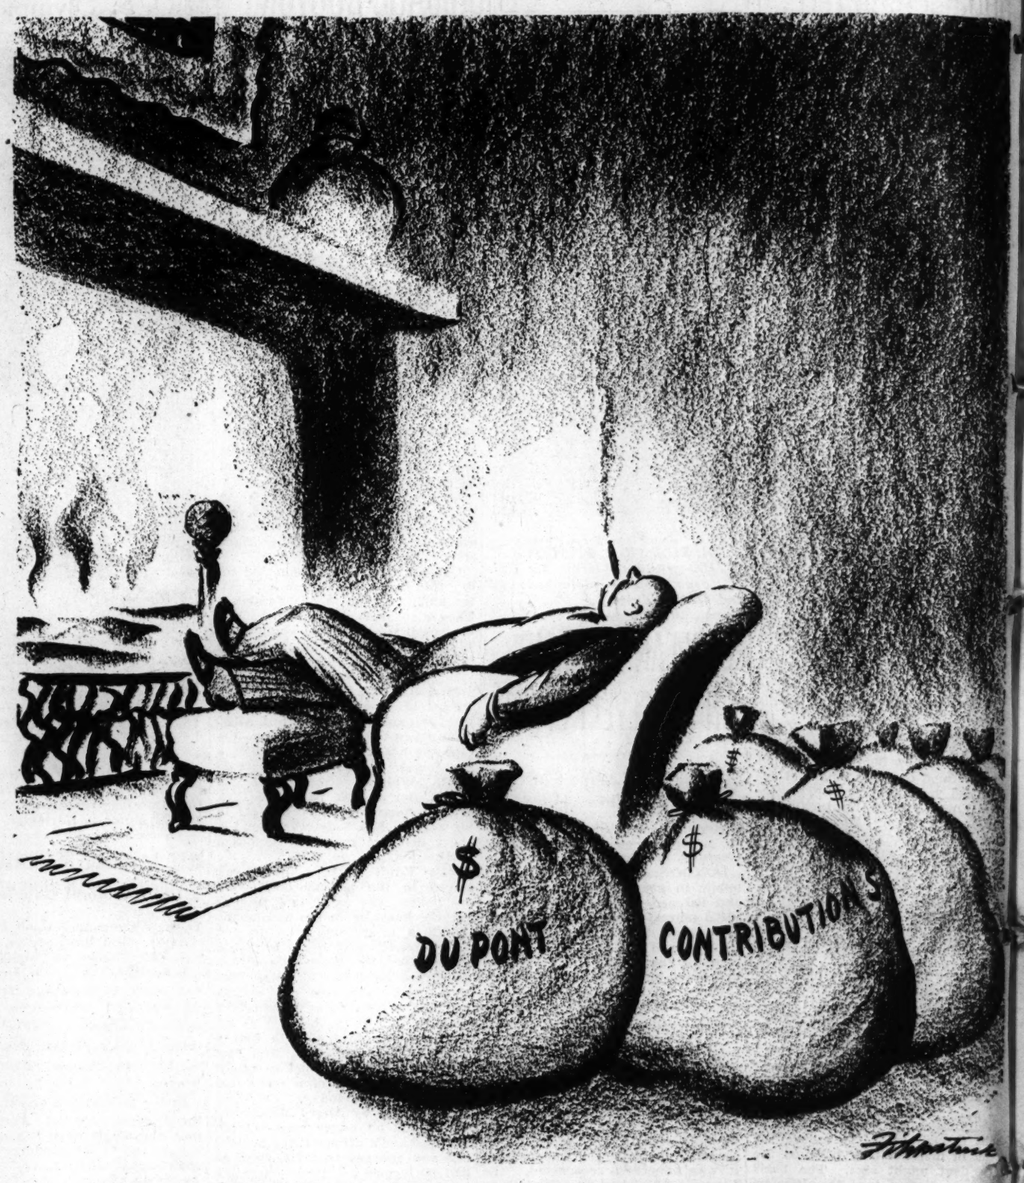

STATES' RIGHTS IN KANSAS.

Other states may be beset by worry over Federal incursions on their sovereign rights, but not sunny Kansas. It works the other way in the Sunflower State, in fact, and soon the country may be hearing wails from Washington about the State's usurpation of Federal rights.

The episode concerns the favorite Kansas bogy, John Barleycorn. The State is legally dry and so, rules its Attorney-General, shall be the military posts within its borders. Fort Riley and Fort Leavenworth may be under Government jurisdiction; crimes committed there may be subject to trial in Federal courts. Nevertheless, the Kansas bone-dry law rules the commissaries and the military's liquid menu, the ruling says, reversing that of the previous Attorney-General.

If the states' righters offer a prize, it belongs by all means to Attorney-General Clarence V. Beck. And if the 1936 Republican platform is to uphold states' rights, the incident should redound to the glory of the State's favorite son, Gov. Alf M. Landon. Except that prohibition, in whose name Topeka defies Washington, is not the rallying cry over the nation that it is in Kansas.

THE LIBERTY BOYS AT VALLEY FORGE—1936.

Orphaned Silver

Desertion of silver basis by China, with threat that it will dump huge quantities on world market, is causing administration to reconsider its policy, writer says; all the benefits promised when program was launched have failed of fulfillment; meanwhile, torrent of gold from abroad has upset calculations of the Treasury.

From the Nation.

A VERITABLE panic was created in the world's silver markets on Dec. 10 when the United States suddenly discontinued its purchases. The alarm subsided somewhat upon Secretary Morgenthau's announcement that silver buying would be resumed, though it would not be carried on predominantly, as heretofore, in London. But despite this reassurance, it is evident that the administration is being forced to reconsider its entire silver policy.

Purchases during the past few days have been insignificant compared to the enormous amounts which the Government has acquired in recent weeks, and although on previous occasions the Treasury has stepped in to avert a collapse in the market, it now seems indifferent to sagging prices.

One does not need to look far to discover why the administration has suddenly tired of its role of Santa Claus to silver producers and speculators throughout the world. China, which was supposed to be one of the chief beneficiaries of our silver-purchasing program, suffered so severely from the deflationary effect of rising silver prices that it was forced, early in November, to abandon the silver standard.

While it will be impossible to change the habits of the Chinese people overnight, this action carries with it the prospect that China may ultimately dump billions of ounces of the metal on the markets of the world. A threat by Nanking to sell the 200,000,000 ounces which it obtained by the recent nationalization decree is said to be the immediate cause of the Treasury's cessation of buying. With China's huge stocks overhanging the market, not even the Treasury's recent purchases of 20,000,000 ounces a week would support prices.

* * *

It is much easier to indicate why the buying program was suddenly brought to a standstill than to give a logical explanation of the theory behind the "do-something-for-silver" legislation. Silver production is among the least important of American industries, the average output from 1931 to 1933 amounting to about $8,000,000. It is true that the silver lobby was well organized and carried on an extraordinarily effective propaganda campaign. But despite the good fortune that scattered silver ore through six states and gave the silver interests control over 12 Senators, the propaganda could scarcely have been effective if it had not been for the average American's appalling naivete on monetary matters.

Great stress was laid, for instance, on the alleged benefits to trade which would result from "raising the purchasing power of the hundreds of millions of persons who live in the East." These benefits were supposed in some occult way to extend not only to trade with China, which was on a silver standard, but also to trade with India and Japan—presumably because they once had utilized silver as a monetary base. Actually, of course, the reverse has been true: our exports to China in the first eight months of 1935 were only 50 per cent as large as in the same period of 1934.

Another argument, used in committee rooms and lobbies but avoided in public, was the tremendous sum which the United States could make by cornering the world's silver market. It was pointed out that the total amount of silver in the world, about 15 billion ounces, was approximately 25 times the aggregate amount of gold, 600,000,000 ounces, but that the price of gold per ounce was nearly 50 times that of silver. The United States was powerful enough, it was contended, to bring silver back at least to the same relative value as gold. And in the process, all the silver bought at less than $1.40 an ounce would be just so much profit for Uncle Sam. The abandonment of silver in China completely wrecked this little dream. Deprived of its monetary significance, silver may easily decline lower than in 1933. The greed of the silver producer for uneconomic profits may lead to the complete bankruptcy of the industry.

In a sense, however, our silver policy is but a by-product of our anachronistic commercial policy. As a creditor nation, we must make some provision for our debtors to meet their obligations to us. We are insistent that payment shall not be in goods or services; on the contrary, we continue to maintain a "favorable" balance of trade, thus increasing the payments which must be made to this country. Since 1930, we have refused to extend substantial loans to cover the payments due us. This leaves us with no alternative but to accept huge quantities of gold and silver, which, though useless to us, impose an overwhelming burden on the world's monetary structure.

Meanwhile, our lust for gold has practically upset our silver policy. A year and a half ago, it was estimated that we should need to acquire only about 1,500,000,000 ounces of silver in order to attain the 1-to-3 ration prescribed by the Silver Purchase Act. Thus far, we have acquired 762,000,000 ounces, but meanwhile more than two billion dollars' worth of gold has been imported, leaving the Treasury farther from its goal than it was 18 months ago. No wonder the administration has begun to doubt the efficacy of its program.

THE MANY WASHINGTONS.

From the Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

A SUGGESTION from Washington, State that Washington, D. C., change its name to avoid confusion has brought from the latter's Board of Commissioners this terse reply: "The nation's capital was named after George Washington by the Congress of the United States in the year 1800, 135 years ago."

It is said that the sponsor of the naive suggestion, which apparently was put forth in all seriousness, has not yet decided whether to carry his appeal to Congress, but he would at least contribute to the gaiety of the nation by doing so. Washington, Ga., the county seat of historic Wilkes, then might well insist that the State which took that name as a territory in 1853 and was admitted to the Union in 1889, change its name in deference to the town that dates back to 1780, and that was the first in all the Republic to call itself after the Father of His Country.

Just how many Washingtons, towns and counties, there are in the United States, we have not ascertained. So far, however, the national capital has managed to keep its identity clear among them all.

Dr. Townsend as Dictator

From the Milwaukee Journal.

DR. TOWNSEND of the celebrated old-age pension "plan" explains the failure of his movement to make any impression on Congress last spring by saying: "We have been lying low all this time. We wanted to steal a march until we could assume a dictatorial attitude. Now we are so strong we can dictate." Once again we hear that the Republican and Democratic parties are all out. And Dr. Townsend, unlike Father Coughlin, says his movement will have a full ticket of its own in the field.

Experienced observers will doubt this. It is not easy to start a new party.

What is likely is that men with an ambition to run for Congress are being persuaded that the Townsend vote is worth cultivating. The method is familiar; we have seen it again and again. The Anti-Saloon League developed it most fully; the bonus advocates used it; Father Coughlin frankly avows it.

Candidates for Congress, House and Senate, are told that here is something to which they can pledge support, regardless of their party platforms. They can be loyal to party principles, religious creeds and everything and still capture a fine bloc of votes—the strength always exaggerated.

Out of this you can easily get a Congress whose responsibility is honeycombed by these pledges to do a particular thing. Only recently we saw a silver bloc, representing only the selfish interests of a few people in the silver states and of silver speculators, grown so strong that the administration felt compelled to conciliate it by silver legislation which has now got us into plenty of trouble. The bonus bloc is so strong that a Republican candidate, Col. Knox, now absurdly argues in one breath for "economy" and in the next for paying the bonus.

Probably some millions of persons believe that Dr. Townsend really has a plan to make old age luxurious. Not so surprising when you recall that many still fall for the magic claims of cure-all patent medicines and the Drake estate swindle. For, though the Townsend plan has been shown up as unworkable as often as Dr. Townsend has remodeled it, the refutation is as hard to understand as the plan itself. Whereas a promise of $200 a month is very simple.

So dimes and dollars continue to roll into the Townsend coffers. No accounting is made, but the Townsend inner circle must be big business by this time. And Dr. Townsend feels strong enough to say he will "dictate."

All the recovery of the past two and a half years could be thrown away by a Congress which would even temporize with the Townsend inflation scheme.

The leaders of the parties, the men who seriously ask for the presidency for themselves or for others, will not talk Townsend plan. They know its absurdity. But that is not enough. They ought to be talking against it. A few words from a man whose voice is known to the country will do more to check this hallucination and humbug than columns of proof that it is humbug.

VICIOUS CIRCLE.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

WARS bring debts and wars bring depressions and depressions bring still more debts. The wars themselves, the fearful cost of preparing for these wars, the price of maintaining armies and navies and fortifications as the result of fear that war may come again, and the interminable bill for pensions, hospitalization, bonuses and institutional care, bankrupt nations and keep millions of people in bondage.

Did any good ever come out of any war that was not far outweighed by much greater evil?

BONUS leaders have vetoed a secret compromise proposal to exclude from the bonus bill the provision canceling interest charges on loans. This would put the interest charge on each veteran borrowing on his certificate. Veterans' leaders informed congressional spokesmen that they are standing pat on the demand for payment of the full face value of the certificates. . . . Government Printing Office employes have free movies once a week during lunch hour, with dance music or a band concert on other day each week. . . . Contrary to general belief, the Jackson day celebration staged each year on Jan. 8 by the Democratic party is not in memory of the fiery warrior President's birth. It is in honor of his victory over the British at New Orleans. Jackson incidentally was born after the death of his father. Another President with a similar singularity was Rutherford B. Hayes. . . . Texas' bull-voiced Representative, Tom Blanton, who prides himself on being the "watch-dog of the Treasury," is not the first to claim such honor. Old congressional records disclose that as far back as 1850 Representative George Houston of Alabama made political capital by loudly professing similar claims. . . . While a President cannot be arrested while in office, both Presidents Pierce and Grant were momentarily placed under arrest while White House incumbents; the former when he accidentally ran down a woman while riding horseback and the latter for racing his driving horses. . . . In addition to daily press releases, the League issues numerous bulletins, pamphlets and other publications.

Home Loan Extension.

Republican strategy in attacking the President's reciprocal trade agreement with Canada will take the form of a move to require Senate ratification of such transactions. . . . Among Democratic Congressmen there is considerable private grousing over the assessment of $50 for a ticket to next week's Jackson day dinner. The boys are complaining that they can't afford the price. Also that if word gets back to their constituents that they attended a $50-a-plate dinner it will do their re-election chances no good. . . . A hot confirmation fight is in prospect against the recent appointment by the President of Lamar Hardy as United States Attorney for the Southern New York District. Hardy, a henchman of Edward J. The New York Bar Association also opposes him. . . . Successor to Huey Long's desk on the Senate floor is Oklahoma's blind Senator Thomas Gore, who aided the late Kingfish in his closing hour filibuster last session, thereby killing the deficiency bill and appropriations for old age pensions. The bronze nameplate on Huey's desk has been given to his widow.

The news of Senator Schall's injury almost caused an injury to the Senate's other blind member, Gore. When the radio announcement reached Gore's ears, he was lying on his back in a barber chair, under the razor. He started to jump

Says We Are Walking cause of Petty Perfor and the Administration.

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

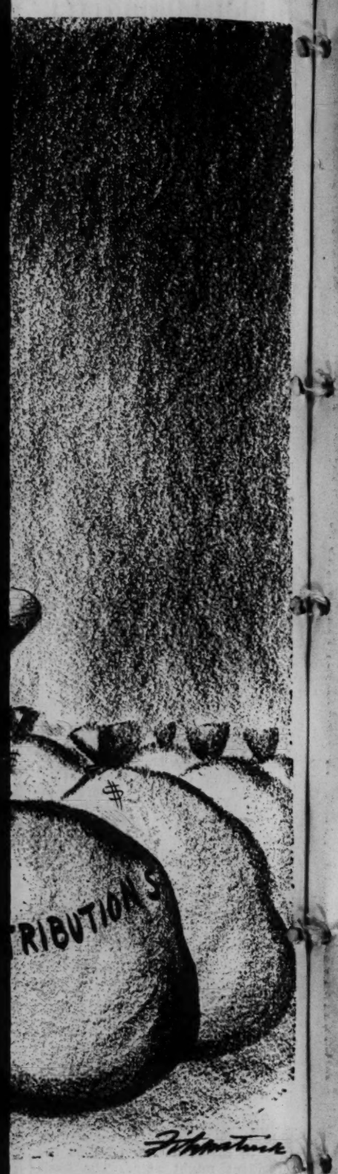

OKMULGEE, Okla.

WHY has practically the whole of business lined up against this administration? It is not half so much for what has been done as for what has been said and threatened on both sides.

At first, business was with this administration. In August, 1933, 97 per cent of it responded to the President's proposed agreement on hours, wages and collective bargaining and thereafter for months extended itself to co-operate. But there were some side-shows near the big top which regarded all commerce as crooked. Whenever action fell within their little orbits, they proceeded on that assumption.

Sometimes these side-shows seemed to overshadow the main show. When business grew threatening about that, the administration was naturally resentful. Business everywhere became first suspicious and progressively convinced that the whole administration was hostile. This is not so. But between business and the White House, slights and offenses on both sides increased. The rift became a chasm.

It was caused by misunderstanding and petulance—a petty per-

Government Printing Office employes have free movies once a week during lunch hour, with dance music or a band concert one other day each week. . . . Contrary to general belief, the Jackson day celebration staged each year on Jan. 8 by the Democratic party is not in memory of the fiery warrior-President's birth. It is in honor of his victory over the British at New Orleans. Jackson incidentally was born after the death of his father. Another President with a similar singularity was Rutherford B. Hayes. . . . Texas' bull-voiced Representative, Tom Blanton, who prides himself on being the "watchdog of the Treasury," is not the first to claim such honor. Old congressional records disclose that as far back as 1850 Representative George Houston of Alabama made political capital by loudly professing similar claims. . . . While a President cannot be arrested while in office, both Presidents Pierce and Grant were momentarily placed under arrest while White House incumbents; the former when he accidentally ran down a woman while riding horseback and the latter for racing his driving horses. . . . The daily stream of publicity handouts issued by the American Liberty League is almost as voluminous as that of the Government departments it criticises. In addition to daily press releases, the League issues numerous bulletins, pamphlets and other publications.

Home Loan Extension.

A BILL is being drafted secretly on Capitol Hill to give a six months period of grace to home owners who are delinquent in their payments on Government loans. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation recently reported that approximately 20 per cent of the total payments due it are 90 or more days overdue. . . . Republican strategy in attacking the President's reciprocal trade agreement with Canada will take the form of a move to require Senate ratification of such transactions. . . . Among Democratic Congressmen there is considerable private grousing over the assessment of $50 for a ticket to next week's Jackson day dinner. The boys are complaining that they can't afford the price. Also that if word gets back to their constituents that they attended a $50-a-plate dinner it will do their re-election chances no good. . . . A hot confirmation fight is in prospect against the recent appointment by the President of Lamar Hardy as United States Attorney for the Southern New York District. Hardy, a henchman of Edward J. Flynn, Bronx political boss, is being opposed by the Manhattan Tammany leaders, who view his elevation to the powerful position as a direct slap at them. The New York Bar Association also opposes him. . . . Successor to Huey Long's desk on the Senate floor is Oklahoma's blind Senator Thomas Gore, who aided the late Kingfish in his closing hour filibuster last session, thereby killing the deficiency bill and appropriations for old age pensions. The bronze name plate on Huey's desk has been given to his widow.

The news of Senator Schall's injury almost caused an injury to the Senate's other blind member, Gore. When the radio announcement reached Gore's ears, he was lying on his back in a barber chair, under the razor. He started to jump up, but was restrained. . . . Friends of Senator Nye are telling him that although his neutrality efforts are making him a national figure, he will have to swing 'round to farm problems to win votes from North Dakota farmers. . . . The Supreme Court's Deputy Marshal, Thomas Waggaman, says, "I've been crying for 21 years." As Court Crier, he is the man who calls out, "Oyez, Oyez," etc., when the Justices are about to sit. Despite the 21 years, he keeps before his eyes a copy of his saluation, lest he forget his piece. He says, "Friends tell me I'll go hay-wire one of these days."

Consumers.

LACKING the authority to compel bakers to submit their production costs, the AAA Consumers Counsel has sent questionnaires to bread makers in 22 cities, asking them to give such information voluntarily. So far only a few replies have been received . . . More than a half million workers have been taught to read and write by CWA and PWA adult classes.

In order to prevent Asiatic insects from being brought into the U. S. by the trans-Pacific mail planes, the ships and their cargo —when they arrive on the West Coast—are subject to a microscopic inspection by Department of Agriculture inspectors.

Crowded Out.

THE Bituminous Coal Commission may be the first of the New Deal agencies to establish main headquarters outside the capital. Four months of fruitless search to find adequate office space in Washington has about decided the Commission to look elsewhere. In the event the Commission does move, the choice lies between three cities: Pittsburgh, Charleston, W. Va., and Cincinnati.

Washington's large squirrel population is feeding on raw peanuts this winter. Reason is that the National Capital Parks Service found that if the nuts were roasted the squirrels had to compete with humans for their meals. . . . Confidential word has reached Federal authorities that the pro-Nazi "Friends of New Germany" are secretly planning to move their national headquarters from New York to Detroit. Also, Fritz Gissibl, present "Leader" of the organization, will be deposed and Fritz J. Kuhn of Detroit installed in his place.

Part II of the sensational study of company unions made by David Saposs, Labor Department expert, will be published in the February issue of the Monthly Labor Review. It will give specific figures on the growth of company unionism in industries opposed to independent labor organizations. Publication of the first mention of the survey recently aroused vehement protests from many business men who threatened reprisals on the Labor Department by refusing to furnish further employment statistics. . . . The drive of the army for complete mechanization has recalled to War Department historians that in 1855 Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of War, persuaded Congress to appropriate $30,000 to import a herd of camels for military purposes in the Southwest. The experiment proved a failure, and after the Civil War the 75 animals, which had cost several hundred dollars apiece, were sold to circuses and shows at $31 a head. . . . The administration will seek legislation at this session of Congress giving the National Emergency Council a permanent status. The agency has been operating on a temporary basis, under an executive order, during the two years of its existence. A bill for the proposed change has been drafted and will be offered at an early date.

General Johnson's Article

Says We Are Walking Into Class Warfare Because of Petty Performance by Both Business and the Administration.

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

OKMULGEE, Ok.

WHY has practically the whole of business lined up against this administration? It is not half so much for what has been done as for what has been said and threatened on both sides.

At first, business was with this administration. In August, 1933, 97 per cent of it responded to the President's proposed agreement on hours, wages and collective bargaining and thereafter for months extended itself to co-operate. But there were some side-shows near the big top which regarded all commerce as crooked. Whenever action fell within their little orbits, they proceeded on that assumption.

Sometimes these side-shows seemed to overshadow the main show. When business grew threatening about that, the administration was naturally resentful. Business everywhere became first suspicious and progressively convinced that the whole administration was hostile. This is not so. But between business and the White House, slights and offenses on both sides increased. The rift became a chasm.

It was caused by misunderstanding and petulance—a petty performance on both sides. It is tragic nonsense, because a political issue of "government vs. business" is the stuff of which civil war is made. That economic power in private hands must be supervised for the public welfare is an axiom—that it must be transferred to Government is revolution.

This administration is not revolutionary, but this kind of petty cross sniping inflamed to an artillery duel is sure to make it so.

If all of business is anti-administration in an election, then the administration must be anti-business to survive. That of itself is class warfare—the haves against the have-nots—the purpose of Karl Marx. We are walking into it blindly, and all for the lack of just a little more mutual understanding than rules a riotous shindy at the Donnybrook Fair.

ASSOCIATED PRESS ATTACKS VALIDITY OF U. S. LABOR ACT

OBJECTS TO CHECK OF BOOKS, RECORDS

Petition Says Employe Relations Law Is Not Within Constitutional Powers of Congress.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The Associated Press filed suit in the United States District Court here yesterday for a declaratory judgment and injunction against Elinore Morehouse Herrick, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, and the members of the board; John Doe, trial examiner-designate or to be designated; the American Newspaper Guild and David Moscowitz, regional attorney for the board.

The Associated Press set forth that it has been summoned to attend a hearing Jan. 8 "on a question alleged to affect commerce within the meaning of Section 2, subdivisions 6 and 7" of the National Labor Relations Act "concerning the representation of employes in a certain unit (editorial news department)" and not in an executive capacity, in the New York office.

(The hearing Jan. 8 was called on complaint of Morris Watson, vice-president of the American Newspaper Guild for wire service employes. Watson, a reporter for the Associated Press, was discharged after he had made requests of the Associated Press for collective bargaining negotiations with the Newspaper Guild, representing Associated Press employes.)

Complaint by Associated Press.

The Associated Press charges that the members of the Labor Board—J. Warren Madden, John M. Carmody and Edwin S. Smith—"threaten to cause investigators to enter the complainant's offices and to examine complainant's books and records" and to "interview the complainant's employes and otherwise interfere with the discharge of complainant's business and its relations with its employes"; also to "compel production of private books, records and documents" with the possibility of a penalty, for non-conformity to the board's orders, $5000 fine, or one year in prison, or both.

The petition says: "The National Labor Relations Act is not in truth and in fact a law and cannot be enforced, and said the pretended statute is void and unconstitutional in its entirety and of no force and effect."

Plea to Halt Proceedings.

The plaintiff asks for an injunction restraining the defendants from proceeding further on a complaint based "on charges of the American Newspaper Guild," and "from further enforcement of said National Labor Relations Act against the complainant in connection with the employment or discharge of Morris Watson, or in connection with the designation or selection of representatives of complainant's employes."

The Associated Press charges that the act is "not within the powers conferred upon Congress by the Constitution and is in violation of the tenth amendment; that it "deprives the complainant, its officers, directors and members of liberty without due process of law" in violation of the Constitution and the fifth amendment thereof.

CELLIST GARBOUSOVA IS SYMPHONY SOLOIST

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

RAYA GARBOUSOVA, the Russian violoncellist, was the soloist at yesterday afternoon's concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, playing the B Major concerto by Boccherini and Tschaikowsky's Variations on a Rococo Theme. She was provided with effective support by the orchestra under Vladimir Golschmann and the audience was sufficiently unmindful of its Friday afternoon decorum to reward her with generous marks of its approval.

Mme. Garbousova's facility with her instrument, as well as a fundamentally sensitive musicianship, was manifest in everything she played. Her tone had a consistently maintained richness of quality, her articulation was fluent and at the same time precise, her phrasing was immaculate and her distribution of emphasis was always such as to point up the significance of the music. But though her style was free and effortless, it was obviously an outgrowth of security—security in her technique and in her conviction about the meaning of what she was playing. This freedom of style was as easily accommodated to the formal and somewhat innocuous charm of the Boccherini concerto as to the more expressive music of Tschaikowsky. And Tschaikowsky, in those rare moments when he is not tearing his heart out by the roots, is a congenial composer.

In the first half of the program the orchestra played the "Classic Symphony" by Sergei Prokofieff with every consideration for its skilled workmanship and its sophisticated graces. If it was composed in the spirit of a special kind of masquerade—Marie Antoinette as a Shepherdess, Andrew Mellon as St. Francis of Assisi, etc., etc.—it may be considered entirely successful. But whatever the intention, any footnote references to Mozart are unfortunate. No doubt there is a certain amount of lace and brocade in Mozart but the reason he is played in the twentieth century is a reason that has nothing to do with eighteenth century cliches.

The orchestra was even more effective in "The Saga" by Sibelius, although it seemed to this reviewer that Mr. Golschmann made the music less moving by making it more approachable. Even if in this early work the temperature and general aspect of the realm of action suggested by Sibelius' music is one of mystery and remoteness, Mr. Golschmann brought it a little closer. Nevertheless, the performance yesterday was not only forceful in its general sweep but carefully worked out in detail and closely integrated. All the choirs played expressive parts in a performance that had exciting dynamic contrasts as well as discriminating nuances. Mr. Zotarelle's clarinet solo was excellent.

The two other orchestral numbers on the program were Ravel's "Alborado del Gracioso," which was given for all it was worth in the way of provocative color and rhythm, and "The Wedding Procession of King Dodon" from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Coq d'Or," which provided a stirring finish.

SOVIETS TAKE URUGUAY ACTION TO THE LEAGUE

Russia Invokes Articles XI and XII of Covenant and Asks for Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Jan. 4.—Soviet Russia appealed to the League of Nations against Uruguay's breaking off diplomatic relations today, asking that the dispute be heard at the mid-January session of the League Council.

Invoking Articles XI and XII of the League Covenant, the Moscow Government based its action on Paragraph 2 of Article XI, which declares it to be the friendly right of each member to bring to the attention of the Council situations which threaten to disturb international peace or good understanding.

The Soviet Government also cited Paragraph 1 of Article XII, under which members of the League agree that if a dispute arises which is liable to lead to a rupture, they will submit the question either to judicial settlement or to inquiry by the Council, executive organ of the League.

Alexander Minkin, former Soviet Minister to Uruguay, sailed from South America for Europe yesterday with members of his family and staff, and Uruguay has recalled its Charge d'Affaires from Moscow.

The Uruguayan Government handed Minkin his passport last week, effecting the break in diplomatic relations, on charges that the Soviet Legation in Montevideo was involved in the November extremist uprisings in Brazil.

M'DONALD REPORT ON JEWS ASSAILED IN GERMAN PRESS

Called "Hate Pamphlet of a Failure" After Being Ignored for Several Days.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—The report of James G. McDonald, former League of Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from Germany, which attacks "persecution" of Jews in Germany, is editorially denounced by German newspapers.

The report, ignored for several days by the German press, is assailed under headlines such as "The Hate Pamphlet of a Failure" and "McDonald in a Glass House."

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt says McDonald's criticism of the treatment of Jews in Germany sounds strange, coming from an American. It asserts the United States, since 1923, has been trying, through its immigration laws, to throttle the further influx of "Mediterranean Slavs and, above all, Jewish" immigrants.

The text of McDonald's statement has not been published in Germany.

Dr. Butler Says Academic Freedom Has Vanished From Russia, Germany and Italy.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, in a speech to alumni yesterday, declared "the university has disappeared from the totalitarian state," and "university life of the world at this moment begins west of the Rhine."

He urged preservation of academic freedom, which, he said, has vanished in Russia, Germany and Italy. Human progress is impossible among men who are not free to think and tell their fellows the result of their thinking," he concluded.

AMERICAN EXHIBIT AT CITY ART MUSEUM

32 Nationally-Known Painters Represented — Works by 15 St. Louisans.

The thirtieth annual exhibition of paintings by American artists opened today at City Art Museum in Forest Park, presenting 56 paintings by 32 nationally-known artists who were invited to exhibit, along with 15 pictures by as many St. Louis artists which were chosen in a competition last spring.

If this compact yet varied display may be taken as representative of the whole field of contemporary American art—and Director Meyric R. Rogers of the museum gives assurance that this was the major objective when the pictures were selected—it is apparent that American artists are getting back to earth.

All of the pictures are pictures of something more tangible than an idea locked in the mind of the painter expressed in symbols known to him alone. Expressionism, surrealism and experiments in pure abstraction are lacking, though their impress may be observed in some of the pictures.

Comment in Catalogue.

"On the whole," as Rogers observes in a foreword to the catalogue, "in recent years more attention seems to have been paid to subject matter that is of interest in addition to its painting qualities or its ability to suggest a stimulating problem in design.

"This new naturalism, if we can call it such, is coming to us either in the rather cynical and negative form of 'sur-realism,' which has found little foothold in this country, or with the frank admission that a definite and easily understood connection with general human experience is not only admissible, but of vital importance as long as it is removed from mere illustration by a firm structure in design and color."

Despite the variety of approach which characterizes contemporary American painting, Rogers adds, there are more than casual indications of a certain coalescence," perhaps a process of nationalistic digestion," which is shaping it into more homogeneous groups, one concerned with depicting the distinctive feature of urban and rural life, another devoted to problems of the social order.

"Both these groups are gaining adherents and so far as their concerns are with actual life of our times," he concludes, "their efforts are constructive and healthy. It is true that the artist should be an interpreter, but his work is necessarily ineffectual if he is mentally and spiritually out of touch with those whom he is supposedly attempting to reach."

Thomas Hart Benton's Work.

Among the few still lifes in the exhibition is "Trumpet" by Henry Mattson, Swedish-born painter who now paints at Woodstock, N. Y. His "Deep Water," a view of the ocean coast with waves pounding against rocks beneath an ominous sky, is regarded by Rogers as possibly the finest picture in the show.

Two early pictures of Louis M. Eilshemius, who was somewhat amused and amazed a few years ago when New York critics "discovered" him as he neared the age of 70 after a long life of painting, are included. They are a landscape and a view of the Vavau Tonga Islands.

Eugene Speicher's magnificent portrait "Red Moore" and two smooth landscapes by Edward Bruce will claim the attention of visitors as will the Apache encampment scene by Oscar Berninghaus, former St. Louisan who now paints at Taos, N. M.

Names of Other Artists.

Other artists in the invited section are Wayman Adams, Milton Avery, Robert Brackman, Ross Braught, Charles Burchfield, Stephan Etnier, Helen Sawyer Farnsworth, Jerry Farnsworth, Arnold Friedman, Earl Horter, Benjamin Kopman, Walt Kuhn, Sidney Laufman, Peppino Mangravite, Herbert Meyer, Dudley Morris, Henry V. Poor, Constantine Pougalis, Paul Sample, Millard Sheets, Simkha Simkhovitch, Joseph Getlar Smith, Raphael Soyer, Lee Townsend and Harold Weston.

The St. Louisans, whose pictures were shown at the museum last May with others by St. Louis artists, are Helen Louise Beccard, Alice Bunch, Fred Conway, E. V. Gauger, C. K. Gleeson, Fred Henze, Martha H. Hoke, Janet Johns, Joe Jones, Donald Williams (who paints under the name Elmo D. Lattimer), Charles F. Quest, A. W. Saunders, Rudolph Tandler, E. Oscar Thalinger and J. Baare Turnbull.

The exhibition, installed in the large gallery west of Sculpture Hall, will remain until Feb. 16.

Education as Safeguard Against False Leadership

Dr. Oscar Riddle Says Man May Be Orator With Following and Still Be Statesman of Low Order.

"A learned person may be, and often is a stupid one," Dr. Oscar Riddle, biologist of the Carnegie Institution, told a radio audience last evening in urging less literary and academic learning in the prevailing educational system and more biological fact and practical affair.

"It would seem quite impossible that our modern bee-hive aggregations of men can satisfactorily or even actually persist without widespread familiarity with the nature and resources of ourselves and our communities," he asserted.

"The biologist," he declared, "would like to see a far more general recognition of the fact that the primary object of education is to make the individual able rather than learned. The brains of most of our youth are capable. Let us stimulate and reward their continuous activity, and let us—in school and out—avoid giving them assurances and sedatives which only put them to sleep.

"We Are Not a Thinking People."

"Although we of these states are not a thinking people," he went on, "this probably means merely that we have failed to train for thinking. We wish we, our neighbors and our children were just that because we see our neighborhood and home and offspring thus made even more pleasant and valuable, and perhaps also because in these days of shattered governments abroad we should all feel nationally more secure.

"It should be easy to increase our natural tendency toward thoughtfulness, and the thought I bring is that we can make ourselves, our community and our nation more thoughtful and more secure through training that our secondary schools should give.

Savages, kept alert by constant danger, were constantly thinking about the meaning of what they saw and heard, Dr. Riddle said, whereas civilization and sheltered childhood had removed much of the stimulus to thought.

Young savages were trained in the use of what would be called sciences today, he continued, adding that in modern high schools science was obscured by courses of a literary and classical nature.

Dr. Riddle's Proposal.

Dr. Riddle's proposal was for placing in secondary schools a four-year course in life-science, which he described as "not only a great treasury of vitally important practical knowledge but also a method of learning how men may live together."

Educational safeguards were needed, Dr. Riddle said, against the danger of leadership of men not forced to the fore by sheer constructive ability but by the power of effective writing and speaking a situation made possible by modern printing, talking pictures and radio.

"Responsible posts of leadership of public opinion and of the modern state have become accessible to the skilled orator," he said, "even though his ability in statesmanship may be of quite low order. America and the world now require a new defense against their inevitable orators, actors and emotional giraffes."

Among the "irreplaceable things" which life-science may teach the citizen, Dr. Riddle said, were organic evolution, principles of heredity, the modifiability of the growing organism (including man himself), the cure of disease through vitamins.

Dr. Riddle's talk, on "Life Science and Man," was given in connection with the convention of the American Association for Advancement of Science.

COUNCIL AIDS LEARNED MEN IN EXILE FROM GERMANY

68 Scientists and Scholars Given Employment in England; Posts for 2000 Is Goal.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Sixty-eight scientists and scholars, refugees from Germany, have found permanent employment in England, and 140 more are being helped in one way or another, according to a report of the Academic Assistance Council.

The council, supported by voluntary contributions, is one of three international organizations assisting university leaders in exile from Germany.

Some of the scientists, those engaged in research chemistry especially, have taken industrial positions here. Four have obtained university posts and the rest have become consultants or taken up medical practice.

Efforts are being made, the council reports, to place 2000 German University refugees, of all categories, in positions in all parts of the world. Some whose names are listed are still in Germany.

Maintenance grants have been provided by the council to some of the refugees, amounting to $1250 a year for married men and $900 for single men.

ANGINA PECTORIS TREATMENT ONLY FOR RELIEVING DISTRESS

Doctor Corrects Report That He and Associates Said They Had Found Cure.

Dr. John C. Krantz Jr. of the University of Maryland reported as announcing he and associates had found a cure for angina pectoris, said today that the only claim made for the treatment was that patients had "obtained relief from distress and apprehension in most cases."

The mistake was made because of a misunderstanding of an advance summary of his talk given here before the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The treatment employed trichlorethylene, an old drug, said by Dr. Krantz to have no specific action on the coronary arteries which feed the heart, but to relieve symptoms of the disease apparently by depression of the pain centers in the brain.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO SCIENCE OF TWO ST. LOUISANS RECALLED

Scientific accomplishments of two St. Louisans of the last century, Frederick A. Wislizenus, physician and meteorologist, and William Chauvenet, mathematician, were related yesterday at a joint meeting of the History of Science Society and the St. Louis Academy of Science at Hotel Mayfair.

Dr. Robert E. Schlueter, St. Louis physician, gave a biographical sketch of Wislizenus, a founder of the local academy, whose scientific observations included geography, physiology, archeology and botany. Chauvenet, who as a professor of mathematics, was largely responsible for the present organization of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, was the second chancellor of Washington University and an early president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. His accomplishments were reported by Dr. William H. Roever, professor of mathematics, Washington University.

Dr. Joseph Grindon, St. Louis physician, recounted the history of the St. Louis Academy of Science since its formation in 1856. He told of the scientific work of several of its members, and the efforts of the society to gather material for a museum of natural history.

WALL STREET FAILS TO SEE ROOSEVELT TALK EFFECT

Market Traders Actively Bid for Rail Shares While Showing Lack of Interest in Balance of List.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Rail stocks spurted 1 to 2 or more points in today's brief market session, but mixed price movements spotted the remainder of the list.

The President's message to Congress was received calmly and brokers said it was questionable as to what influence it may have had on equities. The rally of the carriers put the ticker tape 3 minutes behind floor dealings and transfers approximated 1,600,000 shares. The close was irregular.

Rails Start Late.

The transportation group started late, but it made up for lost time during its speedy advance. Among the prominent gainers in this division were Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, N. Y. Central, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Great Northern and Pennsylvania.

A steady to firm tone was shown by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Pierce Oil preferred, Montgomery Ward, Packard, Allied Chemical and General Asphalt. Among losers of fractions to a point or so were Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Schenley, National Distillers, Woolworth, Bethlehem, United Aircraft, Boeing and Douglas Aircraft. A loss of about 5 points was suffered by Waukesha Motors.

The aircrafts were still in a profit-taking area and the automotive section drooped following estimates of lower production this week, although the reduced number of working days were said to have accounted for much of the decline in output.

Commodities were narrow, as were the majority of foreign exchanges. Bonds were steady.

Point to Challenge.

Financial quarters seemed to find some cheer in the Roosevelt statement that new taxes were not contemplated. The fact that no proposals for new legislation were made was also seen as helpful to business. Everyone apparently was in accord with the sentiments regarding world peace.

Although some were inclined to perceive a little bullish fuel in the chief executive's words, securities circles noted that opponents of the New Deal were again challenged.

Rail equities came to the fore partly on expectations that the industrial progress of the past year will be substantially extended in 1936 and that net income of the carriers will thereby cover charges and put a number of the roads back on a basis where some dividends can be disbursed.

There was a large turnover in Packard Motors following action of the company's directors in voting a 10-cent dividend, the first since December, 1931. A few of the oils were favored on reports of an imminent advance in crude petroleum prices. Several specialties among the industrials continued to reflect earnings optimism.

Wheat ended up ⅛ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel and corn was ⅛ to ⅜ firmer. Cotton yielded 10 to 40 cents a bale. The French franc closed .00⅜ of a cent off at 6.59⅜ cents. Belgas were down .02, guilders unchanged and Swiss francs .02 of a cent higher. Sterling was ⅛ of a cent firme rat $4.93 and the Canadian dollar was 1-16 of a cent easier at 99.62½ cents.

Overnight Developments.

While the President's message, as a subject of debate, in the financial district, overshadowed most overnight developments, observers did not entirely overlook other market influences.

Much interest was expressed in the recommendation made to Congress by the SEC that the prohibition against trading in unlisted stocks on securities exchanges, due to go into effect on June 1, be lifted because of the possibility that its enforcement might result in the concentration in New York City of control over the nation's capital resources.

Further confirmation of "easy money" conditions throughout the country was seen by bankers in the action of the Texas Corporation in calling for payment April 1 $30,000,000 of its 5 per cent debentures, due Oct. 1, 1944. Redemption will be made by means of bank borrowings, presumably at a lower rate, and out of the company's surplus cash.

FINANCIAL BAROMETER.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Member banks of the Federal Reserve system added about $1,500,000,000 to their balances on deposit with the reserve banks last year, as recorded in the system's year-end statement. The total was under the 1935 peak attained shortly before a heavy mid-December transfer of funds to the Treasury in payment of security purchases and against income tax payments.

Reserve officials expect a further increase in member balances this year, unless the tide of gold turns against the United States soon.

Total member bank balances compared as follows:

Week ended Dec. 31 — —$5,587,000,000
Preceding week— — —$5,429,000,000

WHEAT MARKET RULES HIGHER ON GRAIN BOARD

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Despite refusal of the Winnipeg market to follow action here, Chicago wheat prices ruled higher today, influenced by reported fresh European war dangers.

Profit-taking sales at the last, however, eased the Chicago wheat market somewhat from the day's top levels. The Canadian Government Wheat Board was reported as a seller of May wheat holdings at Winnipeg.

Wheat closed firm, ⅛@⅝c above yesterday's finish, May $1.02⅜@1.02½; corn, ⅛@⅜c up, May 61⅞@62c; oats, unchanged to ¼c advanced, and provisions unchanged to 5c off.

Advancing quotations on grain early today went hand in hand with advices from abroad pointing to possible renewal of a war crisis in Europe over oil.

A rise of a cent a bushel for wheat was attained in short order, despite transient market uncertainty shown at the outset. Corn, oats and rye all made prompt response to wheat price upturns.

Special attention at this stage was given to dispatches pointing out belief prevailed in London that if the Washington administration restricted exports of oil as a war material the League of Nations would follow suit.

Buying of wheat broadened materially when levels below $1.02 were touched. Thereafter, the wheat market went steadily upward, and displayed but little tendency to react. Adding to the upward trend of wheat values was an authoritative estimate that domestic farm reserves of wheat show a 7.4 per cent increased disappearance as compared with a five-year average.

Provisions held about steady.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 13,189,000 bushels, corn 1,897,000. Open interest in wheat was 109,213,000 bushels, and in corn 21,705,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 4.—Wheat and corn futures were higher on bids or offers of grain at close of session. Prices followed outside markets.

Winnipeg wheat started out ⅛@¼c higher. The close was ⅛@¼c net lower.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅛d lower to ⅜d up and closed unchanged to ⅛d higher.

Local wheat receipts which were 49,500 bu, compared with 6000 a week ago and 10,500 a year ago included 24 cars local and 9 through. Corn receipts which were 36,000 bu, compared with 32,500 a week ago and 24,000 a year ago, included 24 cars local. Oats receipts which were 12,000 bu, compared with 12,000 a week ago and 6000 a year ago included 6 cars local. Hay receipts were 4 cars local.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN.

In the cash grain market Saturday corn was 1@1½c higher and oats 1c higher.

Sales made on the floor of the Exchange were as follows:

OATS—Sample grade white, 27½c.

LOW-PRICED RAIL BONDS ARE LEADERS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Firmness in low-priced rail issues, many of which advanced around a point, was an outstanding feature of the corporate bond market up to late today.

United States Governments maintained the steady appearance of the previous session, and while gains were not as pronounced, and there were a few laggards, the main body of active Treasury and guaranteed obligations rose under fairly good demand late.

Two issues of New Haven bonds rallied sharply following announcement that the trustees of the road had asked Federal Court permission to pay interest on underlying issues. Lehigh Valley 4½s, several issues of New York Central and Louisiana & Arkansas 5s were others that attracted attention in the rail group.

The general run of industrial and utility issues edged forward at times with fractional gains.

WHEAT MARKET RULES HIGHER ON GRAIN BOARD

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Despite refusal of the Winnipeg market to follow action here, Chicago wheat prices ruled higher today, influenced by reported fresh European war dangers.

Profit-taking sales at the last, however, eased the Chicago wheat market somewhat from the day's top levels. The Canadian Government Wheat Board was reported as a seller of May wheat holdings at Winnipeg.

Wheat closed firm, ⅛@⅝c above yesterday's finish, May $1.02¾@1.02½; corn, ⅛@⅜c up, May 61⅞@62c; oats, unchanged to ¼c advanced, and provisions unchanged to 5c off.

Advancing quotations on grain early today went hand in hand with advices from abroad pointing to possible renewal of a war crisis in Europe over oil.

A rise of a cent a bushel for wheat was attained in short order, despite transient market uncertainty shown at the outset. Corn, oats and rye all made prompt response to wheat price upturns.

Special attention at this stage was given to dispatches pointing out belief prevailed in London that if the Washington administration restricted exports of oil as a war material the League of Nations would follow suit.

Buying of wheat broadened materially when levels below $1.02 were touched. Thereafter, the wheat market went steadily upward, and displayed but little tendency to react. Adding to the upward trend of wheat values was an authoritative estimate that domestic farm reserves of wheat show a 7.4 per cent increased disappearance as compared with a five-year average.

Provisions held about steady.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 13,189,000 bushels, corn 1,897,000. Open interest in wheat was 109,213,000 bushels, and in corn 21,705,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 4.—Wheat and corn futures were higher on bids or offers of grain at close of session. Prices followed outside markets.

Winnipeg wheat started out ⅛@¼c higher. The close was ⅛@¼c net lower. Liverpool wheat opened ⅛d lower to ⅜d up and closed unchanged to ⅛d higher.

Local wheat receipts which were 49,500 bu, compared with 6000 a week ago and 10,500 a year ago included 24 cars local and 9 through. Corn receipts which were 36,000 bu, compared with 32,500 a week ago and 24,000 a year ago, included 24 cars local. Oats receipts which were 12,000 bu, compared with 12,000 a week ago and 6000 a year ago included 6 cars local. Hay receipts were 4 cars local.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN.

In the cash grain market Saturday corn was 1@1½c higher and oats 1c higher.

Sales made on the floor of the Exchange were as follows:

OATS—Sample grade white, 27½c.

LOW-PRICED RAIL BONDS ARE LEADERS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Firmness in low-priced rail issues, many of which advanced around a point, was an outstanding feature of the corporate bond market up to late today.

United States Governments maintained the steady appearance of the previous session, and while gains were not as pronounced, and there were a few laggards, the main body of active Treasury and guaranteed obligations rose under fairly good demand late.

Two issues of New Haven bonds rallied sharply following announcement that the trustees of the road had asked Federal Court permission to pay interest on underlying issues. Lehigh Valley 4½s, several issues of New York Central and Louisiana & Arkansas 5s were others that attracted attention in the rail group.

The general run of industrial and utility issues edged forward at times with fractional gains.

Texas Co. to Retire $30,000,000 Debentures

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The Texas Corporation, $475,000,000 petroleum concern, will retire $30,000,000 principal amount of its 5 per cent debenture bonds on next April 1 at 101 and interest, it was learned today.

The total amount of the debentures outstanding is around $89,933,000. For retirement of the called portion the company will use treasury cash and bank borrowings, the proportions of each to be determined later.

The debentures mature in 1944.

A. F. OF L. HEAD SAYS 11,672,000 ARE UNEMPLOYED

WPA Is Providing Jobs for 3,500,000 Leaving Eight Million Entirely Idle, Green Estimates.

FIGURES BASED ON UNION REPORTS

Federation President Thinks That Return to Work Has Not Kept Pace With Business Recovery.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—There are still 11,672,000 unemployed in the United States, according to latest estimates, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, reported today.

Of this number, Green said, about 3,500,000 are now being provided for by WPA, leaving more than 8,000,000 "entirely without means of livelihood."

This is a direct challenge to President Roosevelt and others in the administration who have maintained that the 3,500,000 taken care of by WPA represent virtually the whole total of the unemployed, leaving only the "unemployables" to the care of the states under various forms of social insurance.

"It is significant," Green said, "that although business has now recovered half of its depression loss, only 30 per cent of the depression unemployed have been put to work. This is due to the fact that while technological improvements in industry are steadily reducing the number of workers necessary to provide all the goods and services industry can market, the number of men and women who want work is steadily increasing.

Man Hour Production Increased.

"Since 1929, 4,000,000 persons have been added to the army of job seekers, but, in manufacturing industries alone, production per man hour has increased 25 per cent, making it possible to turn out the 1929 volume of product with 1,800,000 fewer workers, if plants operate at 1929 work hours. Similar improvements have reduced the number of jobs available in other industries."

President Roosevelt has insisted that it is impossible to make any estimate of unemployment in this country. The A. F. of L. bases its estimate upon reports of affiliated trade unions.

Figures accompanying Green's statement show that the peak of unemployment, according to A. F. of L. estimates, was in March of 1933, when 15,652,887 were out of work. In February of 1929, still under boom conditions, there were 3,118,695 unemployed. The estimate of 11,672,000 is for November, 1935. In November, 1934, there were 12,580,535 out of work, A. F. of L. figures show.

"Employment in the United States declined less than usual in November this year," Green reported. "The total laid off in industry from Oct. 15 to Nov. 15 was 174,000 in 1935, compared to 320,000 in 1934. In the years from 1929, through 1933, November lay-offs have always exceeded 450,000 and have sometimes even reached 1,000,000 persons.

Smaller Layoffs Encouraging.

"The relatively small layoff this year is, therefore, encouraging and indicates that employment this fall is holding it own better than in any of the last six years," Green asserted.

This is largely to be explained, he said, by a change in motor manufacturing schedules and by the fact that layoffs have been somewhat less in manufacturing and on railroads.

"These developments," Green said, referring to the increase in technological unemployment, "do not mean that industry cannot give work to all who want it. There will be more than enough work to be done in the United States to give every wage and salaried worker a good job and a good living if the workers' buying power is increased sufficiently to lift the general level of production above any we have known before and if work hours are further shortened."

A. F. of L. unemployment estimates are customarily higher than those of the National Industrial Conference Board, a private organization of industrialists which also makes public a national unemployment figure compiled by the board's own staff of statisticians and economists.

TURNING NASTURTIUM INTO GARDEN BEAUTY

Botanist Describes Process by Which It Acquired Plant Patent 141.

The transformation of the nasturtium of grandmother's garden from a simple Cinderella of five petals to a fragrant garden princess of 135 petals was described yesterday by Dr. William H. Eyster, professor of botany at Bucknell University, in a radio address which was part of the program of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

So magnificent has the nasturtium become, that it has been distinguished with a patent—Plant Patent 141—and awarded a gold medal by the officials of the Gardens of the Nations.

When the many colored nasturtium was brought to this country from South America, it had a fleshy stem, umbrella-like leaves and a variety of brightly colored flowers, he said. Then a few years ago a double flowered golden-yellow fragrant variety was discovered in a garden in Mexico. By cross breeding the double varieties of six to 15 petals with the single, all colors that occur in the single were produced in the double.

The cross was accomplished, Dr. Eyster continued, by removing the stamens from the double flowered variety to prevent self-fertilization, and the petals were cut off to discourage insect visits, then the colored single varieties were collected in hand baskets and their pollen was brushed on the pistil of the prepared double flowers.

The plants which developed from the seeds of these flowers, he said, had single, non-fragrant, but brightly colored flowers. These plants were self fertilized and produced offspring having doubleness, fragrance and flowers with all possible color combinations.

"Then, as if by magic," Dr. Cyster said, "a super-double giant flowered type appeared among the cultures." This giant super-double flower has several desirable characteristics—it is unable to produce seeds and "doubtless because of this the plant possesses a greatly increased vegitative vigor and produces flowers profusely," he said.

By breeding this unusual plant, Dr. Eryster concluded, with the single and double varicties it is possible to creat giant, super-double, fragrant, variously colored, profusely blooming plants of unusual vegetation vigor.

LACLEDE CO. ASKS FOR RULING ON PURCHASE FROM AFFILIATE

Asks Court to Adjudicate Doubtful Questions on Right to Buy Electrical Properties.

The Laclede Power & Light Co. yesterday filed suit in Circuit Court, under the new Declaratory Judgments Acts, seeking to have adjudicated any doubtful questions as to its right to purchase electrical properties which it now leases from its affiliated company, Laclede Gas Light Co.

Under the lease contract, the power and light company was to have the option of purchasing the electrical properties for $5,254,000 in cash. It recently received approval of the State Public Service Commission to issue new securities for $8,000,000, part of the proceeds of which were to be used for purchase of the electrical properties.

The petition, filed for the company by Taylor, Chasnoff & Willson, attorneys, asks the court to rule whether the Laclede Gas Light Co. has the right to convey the property free of liens, and to rule on other legal points. The Laclede Gas Light Co. and banking houses which are trustees under mortgage bond issues were named as defendants.

CIRCUIT CLERK'S AIDS TOLD NOT TO MUMBLE COURT OATHS

Manual Issued by H. Sam Priest Tells Them to Be Slow and Clear in Speech.

Deputy Circuit Clerks are admonished to administer oaths to juries and witnesses with "all the strength and solemnity possible" so they will appear to be more than "a jumble of words" in a manual of instructions made public yesterday by Circuit Clerk H. Sam Priest.

In the manual of 30 pages, Priest outlines all of the duties of his deputies. In addition to urging them to use "slow, clear, concise and complete enunciation" in administering oaths, he told them to regard themselves at all times as servants of the court, the members of the bar and the general public.

The manual also contains samples of legal forms and explanations of court entries.

BALTIMORE POLICE UNDER LOTTERY GRAFT INQUIRY

Investigation Made Into Charges That Men of All Ranks Are Being Paid by Racketeers.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 4.—Police Commissioner Charles A. Gaither appointed Police Captain John A. Cooney yesterday to determine the truth of charges that members of the Baltimore Police Department are in the pay of lottery racketeers. Lieut. William C. Feehley of the detective bureau and a squad of detectives were assigned to work with Capt. Cooney.

The appointment of Capt. Cooney was made at the request of State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells. Wells started the investigation on reports of the lottery racket six days ago, after a conference with judges of the criminal court.

Among the evidence turned over to the investigators by the State's Attorney's office were several letters and records of telephone calls charging that policemen "of all ranks" were receiving money from lottery operators.

Commissioner Gaither demoted Sergeant Nereus W. Gunther to the rank of patrolman yesterday and transferred him from one district to another, after a hearing on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. Gunther pleaded guilty of trying to persuade Police Magistrate Charles E. Heintzeman to dismiss a lottery charge against a grocer on his beat.

Judge Albert S. J. Owens earlier in the day had fined five men and a woman $50 each on their pleas of guilty on lottery charges. At the time Judge Owens said "conditions are such as to call for action," and added that lottery operators indicted in the future would receive penalties "much nearer the extreme" of $200 to $1000 fines and three to 12 months' imprisonment.

Motor vehicle fatalities showed an increase of from 160 in 1934 to 164 last year and were responsible for the largest number of accidental deaths during 1935. Accidental falls caused 139 deaths and burns 27. There were 8 drownings last year as compared with 6 in 1934, and one death from accidental discharge of fire-arms, the same number as in the previous year.

C. H. TURPIN WILL ADMITTED TO PROBATE AFTER DISPUTE

Son of Negro Justice of Peace Had Contended Signature Was Not Genuine.

The will of Charles H. Turpin, Negro Justice of the Peace, who died Christmas day at Miami Beach, Fla., from effects of a poisonous insect bite, was admitted to probate by Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold today, following a hearing at which counsel for Turpin's only son, Udell Turpin, contended that the signature on the will, executed Dec. 31, 1931, was not his father's signature.

No estimate was made of the value of the estate, but John A. Davis, counsel for Udell Turpin, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he thought the estate was worth between $70,000 and $100,000, consisting mostly of stock and real estate.

The will made specific bequests as follows: Household goods and personal property to Mrs. Nannie Turpin Thomas, a sister, named as executrix; a police dog to a sister-in-law, Mrs. Willie May Turpin; proceeds of a life insurance policy, value not given, to Mrs. Thomas, Eleanor Turpin, another sister; Nannette Turpin, a niece, and Mrs. Carrie Turpin, former wife. One dollar was left to Udell Turpin. There was no provision for the disposition of the residue of the estate.

At the hearing today, Langston Harrison, Constable in Turpin's court, and Harry Bracy, court clerk, witnesses to the will, testified that they thought Turpin's genuine signature was attached to the will, although they had not seen him sign it.

FUGITIVE ARRESTED AFTER WOMAN TELLS WHERE HE IS

William Durban, for 18 months a fugitive from Madison County (Ill) authorities, was arrested yesterday at the Edgewood Nursery Home, 4201 Edgewood boulevard, St. Louis County, as a result of an anonymous telephone call from a woman to State's Attorney Lester Geers at Edwardsville, disclosing Durban's whereabouts.

Durban, who waived extradition was taken to Edwardsville to face four charges of robbery while armed and a charge of assault with intent to kill, growing out of several holdups in the southwestern part of the county in 1934. The latter charge is in connection with a holdup of a resort at Horseshoe Lake, in which John Bettag Sr., County Game Warden, was shot in the arm when he interrupted the robbers.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF MURDER QUOTED AS TELLING OF GHOST

Neigbars Say They Heard Her Mention Seeing Specter of West Virginia Officer.

LOGAN, W. Va., Jan 4.—State Trooper C. B. Dye filed murder charges yesterday against Mrs. Florence Patrick, 29 years old, of Cora and Garland Adkins, 21, of Mud Fork, in connection with the death of Deputy Sheriff Pat Lee Murphy last July 28. The body was found on rocks near a bridge.

It was at first thought he had fallen, but Dye said his investigation produced evidence Murphy was stabbed with an ice pick after a part yat Mrs. Patrick's home.

Officers held five persons as material witnesses. Among them was Ruby Meade, 16, Mrs. Patrick's daughter by a former marriage.

TELLS OF COMMUNISM OF FLATHEAD INDIANS

Prof. H. H. Turney-High Describes Customs; Prof. E. B. Renaud Also Speaks.

The possibility that man may have existed in this country as early as 250,000 years ago was suggested today by E. B. Renaud, professor of anthropology at the University of Denver, in a paper on recent discoveries of stone tools in Southwestern Wyoming, read to a group of archeologists and ethnologists at Washington University, here for the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

These primitive implements, collected from the workshops of ancient man along old river terraces, proved to be closely similar to the industrial products of Western Europe between 50,000 and 500,000 years ago, Mr. Renaud said. Some of the strongly weathered ones, he declared, appeared to have an approximate age of 250,000 years, based on comparisons with European finds.

Pointing out, however, that archeological resemblence was insufficient to prove absolutely an equal antiquity Dr. Renaud said it remained for geologists and paleontologists to settle the question of actual age.

About 1100 specimens were gathered from nine sites by the second Denver-Wyoming expedition last June, Dr. Renaud related. They were made of chert quartzite and moss agate and consisted for the most part of knives, handaxes, spear points and scrapers.

Communism Among Indians.

Communism and cosmetics, redistribution of wealth and slavery were part of the life of the early Flathead Indians of Montana, Prof. H. H. Turney-High of the University of Montana told a meeting of the anthropological section of the association today.

The labor force of a Flathead band, he said, consisted of all able-bodied men and women, children and slaves. The men hunted and fished "and were pampered by the women for so doing," while the women made camp, prepared the food and made clothing. Menial tasks were done by slaves, invariably war captives.

Horses and food, Prof. Turney-High related, were communal property, although many vegetable foods, gathered by women, constituted private property. In bison hunts, however, the bison carcass became the property of the man whose arrow killed the animal.

But on the night after the hunt the chief made inquiry about the unlucky hunters and rode about the camp on his horse calling out that such-and-such lodges were without meat. To guarantee a certain minimum requirement, women of the well-stocked lodges contributed slabs of meat to the less fortunate.

Voluntary Gifts by Rich.

Another method of distribution of wealth was through voluntary gifts by the rich, Prof. Turney-High said. At regularly held gift dances the wealthy made lavish division of their goods and at any time a poor man might partake of a meal in a rich man's lodge merely by asking.

At the Feast of the Dead, the family of the deceased provided a banquet at which a sort of master of ceremonies exhibited the dead person's possessions and bestowed them one by one upon the guests. A family proudly considering itself rich enough gave away every scrap of property, even including prized war horses.

For the rich to give to the poor, Prof. Turney-High said, was considered honorable.

"Skill, Wit and Bravery."

"But how," he continued, "could a man become rich in a society with so strong a flavor of communal production? True he could not accumulate any more salmon products than his neighbor, but he could gather and his wife preserve an abundance of trout and by superior skill, wit and bravery he could acquire a superabundance of bison products.

"It is therefore interesting that the Flathead uses the adjectives rich, intelligent, brave and industrious almost as though they were synonyms. In common parlance the term "guaguat" is used for all four. Thus Adam Smith's ideas worked out in their society if they do not in ours."

Prof. Turney-High said that although the Flatheads' home region had proved to be rich in minerals, the only mineral which mattered in Flathead life was cosmetic vermillion, which provided red paint for warriors.

Government and Aborigine.

In this country, as nowhere else in the world, is Government unequivocably on the side of the aborigine, Prof. Melville J. Herskovits of Northwestern University told the anthropologists last night.

"That this is true," he said, "is undoubtedly due in large measure to the fact that the Indian is no longer a social or political force to be reckoned with. There are not enough Indians to allow large-scale economic exploitation, nor do they afford enough potential manpower for industry or the army to allow these factors to enter.

"This combination of circumstances makes it possible for the American anthropologist to work whole-heartedly with the Indian office. Thus he is prepared to cooperate in advising on problems of land tenure, knowing that the end in view is to obtain more land for the Indians, not to ascertain that irreducible minimum which can be left to the native, which is the problem of the administrative advisers in Africa."

MIAMI SPRINGS, Fla., Jan. 4.—Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn., burned up the Miami municipal golf course with 66, four under par, to jump into the lead at 36 holes of the 72 hole $2500 Miami open today.

Sarazen, four times winner of the 12-year-old local classic, out in 35, even par, took the back nine apart with six birdies, one par and two bogies for 31.

He seized a one stroke lead over Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., sharpshooter, whose 71 today added to his 68 yesterday for 139 strokes in the two qualifying rounds.

Jules Huot, Quebec, the Canadian P. G. A. titlist, whose 67 was low yesterday, came home today with 72, two over par, to match Runyan's 139.

One stroke behind them were three golfers bracketed at 140—Denny Shute, Chicago, who pieced together two par 70s,; Frank Walsh, another Chicagoan, who had 68 today after 72 yesterday, and Willie Klein, Miami Beach, Fla., who matched Walsh's rounds.

John Revolta, Milwaukee, the National P. G. A. champion, finished the second round with another 71 to make his two day total 142.

At 143 were Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and George Smith, Chicago, who had rounds of 73 today after posting 70's yesterday.

Two Young Eastern Pros. Lead California Open.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Jan. 4.—Two young Eastern golfers entered the second round of the Riverside $3000 open today a bare stroke ahead of a dangerous field of veterans.

The pair, Herman Barron, White Plains, N. Y., and Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., shot the Victoria Club course on the first 18 holes with 68s, four better than par.

Johnny Geertsen, Ogden, Utah, missed the low score bracket by a few inches, coming onto the eighteenth as darkness closed in, his caddy struck a match over the cup, but his short putt went wide.

Sam Parks Jr., Pittsburgh, national open champion, and Walter Hagen celebrated return to par form after dismal journeys around the links in recent weeks. They were grouped with Olin Dutra, former national kingpin of the pros; Craig Wood, Pittsburgh; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Ky Laffoon, Chicago, and Jimmy Thompson, unattached.

MIAMI SPRINGS, Fla., Jan. 4.—Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn., burned up the Miami municipal golf course with 66, four under par, to jump into the lead at 36 holes of the 72 hole $2500 Miami open today.

Sarazen, four times winner of the 12-year-old local classic, out in 35, even par, took the back nine apart with six birdies, one par and two bogies for 31.

He seized a one stroke lead over Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., sharpshooter, whose 71 today added to his 68 yesterday for 139 strokes in the two qualifying rounds.

Jules Huot, Quebec, the Canadian P. G. A. titlist, whose 67 was low yesterday, came home today with 72, two over par, to match Runyan's 139.

One stroke behind them were three golfers bracketed at 140—Denny Shute, Chicago, who pieced together two par 70s,; Frank Walsh, another Chicagoan, who had 68 today after 72 yesterday, and Willie Klein, Miami Beach, Fla., who matched Walsh's rounds.

John Revolta, Milwaukee, the National P. G. A. champion, finished the second round with another 71 to make his two day total 142.

At 143 were Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and George Smith, Chicago, who had rounds of 73 today after posting 70's yesterday.

Two Young Eastern Pros. Lead California Open.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Jan. 4.—Two young Eastern golfers entered the second round of the Riverside $3000 open today a bare stroke ahead of a dangerous field of veterans.

The pair, Herman Barron, White Plains, N. Y., and Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., shot the Victoria Club course on the first 18 holes with 68s, four better than par.

Johnny Geertsen, Ogden, Utah, missed the low score bracket by a few inches, coming onto the eighteenth as darkness closed in, his caddy struck a match over the cup, but his short putt went wide.

Sam Parks Jr., Pittsburgh, national open champion, and Walter Hagen celebrated return to par form after dismal journeys around the links in recent weeks. They were grouped with Olin Dutra, former national kingpin of the pros; Craig Wood, Pittsburgh; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Ky Laffoon, Chicago, and Jimmy Thompson, unattached.

High School Basket Contests Decided in Last Minute of Play

That always thrilling theme the last-minute victory, was repeated in four of the six high school basketball games last night. St. Louis University High scored a field goal with only five seconds to go to beat Roosevelt, 19-17; Webster came from behind in the last 45 seconds to win, 17-16, from Soldan; Maplewood broke up a tie score with a minute to go to defeat Ben Blewett, 17-15; and University City varied the formula a trifle to tie the score in the final seconds and send the game into an overtime period before winning, 33-30 from McKinley.

In other games, Clayton, playing its first game, trounced Ritenour, 31-18, while Central won from Christian Brothers High, 28-12.

U. City Overtime.

University City's Indians, in their first contest of the season, found themselves with a four-point deficit and only two minutes to go. Louis Kaufman sank a long shot, and Bill Chapman followed with another two points to tie the score, 30-30. In the overtime session, Kaufman made another field goal and a free throw for the winning points.

In a preliminary game, alumni teams of University City played, with the 1932-35 players defeating those from 1929-31, 32-22.

The Roosevelt-St. Louis U. High game was, literally, fiercely fought. The players, apparently emboldened when the official seemed to let the game get out of hand, committed about every foul that could be made, from simple shoving to outright tackling.

Close-guarding was the feature of the game, so close that at times it verged on arm-wrestling. Roosevelt led, 3-2, at the end of the first quarter, but the Junior Billikens went ahead, 6-3, at the half.

St. Louis U. High kept its lead during a rough third period, leading 12-10. Ralph Rauscher tied the score at the start of the final quarter, and then the two teams battled on even terms until the final two minutes. Bill Stinson sent the Junior Billikens ahead with a short side shot. With little more than a minute left, Milton Gaebler tied the score with a long one-hand shot, 17-17.

Tommy Woodruff tallied the final two points with only five seconds left to play, snapping a shot from the sideline. There was only time for a jump-up at center before the game was over.

First Roosevelt Defeat.

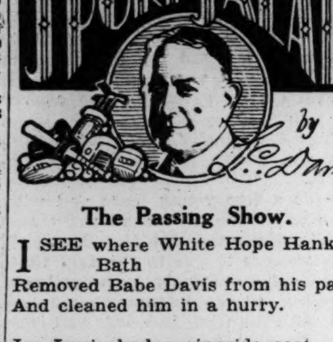

It was the fourth consecutive triumph for St. Louis University High, and the first defeat in seven games for the Rough Riders.

I SEE where White Hope Hankus Bath
Removed Babe Davis from his path
And cleaned him in a hurry.

Joe Louis had a ringside seat,
But didn't seem to worry.

Though Hank draped Babe across the rope,
The justly famous white man's hope
Gained little fame or glory.
While Bath put up a fairish fight
He's at his best on Saturday night—
But that's another story.

But didn't have a word to say
About the Redbirds' shifting
Their base of action to Peru,
Or Kokomo or what have you?—
Oh, whither are we drifting!

Sam Breadon, on the other hand,
Declares that he will take his stand
In his adopted city,
Where after all is said and done
A flock of pennants he has won,
And where he's sitting pretty.

Try, Try Again.

Arithmetical Switch.

BRANCH RICKEY, who leaned heavily on subtraction in his efforts to keep the Cardinals of 1934 at championship strength for the 1935 season, has switched to addition as he rebuilds the Redbirds for the title race of the new year. Branch thought he was doing the best thing for the team when he subtracted Tex Carleton, Chick Fullis, Jim Mooney, Dazzy Vance, Gene Moore, and later Pat Malone. He went so far as to say that the Cardinals needed subtraction more than anything else.

"Addition is the phase of arithmetic in which I am most interested right now," Rickey told the writer yesterday. "There are no trades on the fire, that is none that you would call hot. But I have hopes that something may materialize, possibly at the schedule meeting early next month. Of course, I am still interested in Frankhouse of the Braves. I understand Boston is not inclined to trade Frankhouse, now that it has sent Brandt to Brooklyn. But I am still interested.

"We are not through with our suubtraction just yet. We have released or traded eight men who were on our reserve list after the 1935 season, and at least seven more will be subtracted before we go to training camp, probably long before that time. But the important thing will be addition."

Unimportant Transfers.

WHILE it is true that eight men have been cut off the St. Louis club's reserve list, only three of the eight were important members of the Cardinal squad of 1935. Rothrock was the regular right fielder, Orsatti was a member of the squad of long standing, and Whitehead was No. 1 utility infielder, and, as has been told, Frisch's outstanding understudy. The other members of the departing eight are Bob Worthington, Tony Kaufmann, Phil Collins, Al Fisher and Bob O'Farrell.

O'Farrell was with the Cardinals all year, but his presence was a sentimental gesture. Fisher was not in Cardinal uniform during the season, Worthington was on the squad only momentarily and Kaufmann's late-season transfer from Rochester to St. Louis was important to nobody except the railroad companies. Phil Collins was purchased from the Phillies in the hope that he would bolster the pitching staff, but his work was erratic and he didn't get enough work to justify even the small purchase price.

And so thus far, that drastic overhauling of the Cardinal machine, predicted by Rickey when the 1935 season ended, has not materialized, unless the transfer of Orsatti, Rothrock and Whitehead could be so defined

It is just as well. It would have been a mistake to dispose of more important cogs in the Redbird machine. It would be difficult, even impossible, to replace men like Medwick, Rip Collins, Durocher and Terry Moore. And with DeLancey bed-ridden, it is well that the Cardinals didn't further weaken their catching department by selling or trading Virgil Davis.

They Ran Good Race.

REMEMBER, the Cardinals won 96 games last year, and they'd still be league champions if it hadn't been for the hay-wire stretch drive that carried the Cubs into the world series. Frankie Frisch doesn't need much more. It would be

HORNBOSTEL AND CUNNINGHAM IN 800-METER RACE IN EAST, TONIGHT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—An 800-meter duel between Kansas' Glenn Cunningham and Indiana's Chuck Hornbostel provides the high spot of the annual Columbus Council, K. of C. games, opening the indoor track and field season tonight.

Many other stars, notably Eulace Peacock of Temple, national sprint champion; Joe McCluskey of New York, 5000-meter titleholder, and Milton Sandler of New York, champion at 600 meters, will compete, but the big meet centers around the two middle-distance aces.

Interest in Race.

Even without prospect of record breaking, the race is interesting because Cunningham, almost unbeatable at one mile, is meeting Hornbostel at the shorter distance he favors. The Kansan, world mile record holder both indoors and outdoors last year, opened his indoor campaign in this event and trimmed Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania in the good time of 1:57. Hornbostel was a tenth of a second slower in winning the previous year's race.

Now a graduate student at Harvard, he turned in a brilliant 1:54.6 half mile in the Sugar Bowl meet at New Orleans, showing fine early-season form, and may reverse the decision against Cunningham, who beat him in world-record time in a 1000-meter race last winter.

Venzke, Bill Ray, Manhattan College miler, and Joe Mangan, former Cornell ace, complete the field.

Peacock, a conqueror of the famed Jesse Owens last summer, faces Sam Maniaci of Newark, former Columbia star, Sol Menaker of Pittsburgh, Manny Krosney of New York University and other stars in a sprint series at 60, 80 and 100 meters. The high jump brings together George Spits, New York; Harold Osborn, Philadelphia veteran, and Al Threadgill of Temple.

500-Meter Special.

In the 500-meter special, Sandler heads a fast field, including Johnny Wolff of Manhattan and Harry Hoffman, former N. Y. U. flyer. McCluskey is entered in the 3000-meter run against his teammate, Frank Nordell, and John Wall of Temple.

DON FAUROT AND ASSISTANTS ARE REAPPOINTED

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 4.—The Universtiy of Missouri has rehired its New Deal athletic regime for another year and gave its commander-in-chief, Don Faurot, a boost in salary.

The action was taken by the executive board of curators and announced by President Frederick A. Middlebush of the university.

Faurot, who is head football coach and as chairman of the inter-collegiate coaches virtually directs the athletic department, was given another one-year contract. His salary was set at $5000, a $500 increase.

Chauncey Simpson, head track coach and Faurot's chief assistant, was rehired at $3200, the same as last year, and granted an additional month's leave in the summer.

John Simmons, freshman coach, also was to continue another year at his salary of $2400. Phil Bengston, assistant line coach whose tenure lasted only through the football season, was reappointed for spring football practice and the regular season next fall.

Dr. Middlebush announced the executive board's action was a complete acceptance of the recommendations made early in December by the committee on intercollegiate athletics and the Advisory Athletic Committee.

Faurot came to Missouri a year ago following the resignation of Frank Carideo at the end of three ill-fated football campaign in which Missouri won only one conference battle.

In his first season here, the Tigers won three, lost three and tied three.

Connie Mack Is Reported About Ready to Disclose Second Part Of Big Deal With Boston Club

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—Connie Mack, baseball's master auctioneer, was reported today as about ready to let the public officially in on the second half of the player deal which will about wreck his Athletics and may make pennant caliber of the Boston Red Sox.

Next Tuesday was said to be the day he will formally announce that Doc Cramer, outfielder extraordinary, and Infielder Eric McNair will follow Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum to the Sox, in return for which the Athletics will get some players and a young fortune in Tom Yawkey's cash.

Some More Trading.

Along with this report came the rumor that the Phillies—the other local major league club—is about ready to announce its winter trading, and is only waiting until the fanfare of the Athletics' doings has died down.

The Phils are represented as swapping Pitcher Curt Davis to the Chicago Cubs to get back their former heavy-hitting outfielder, Chuck Klein, who liked the local National League park so much he led the loop in batting while he performed in it.

Impetus at the moment is being given to the Cramer-McNair-to-Boston sale announcement by the Athletics because of the impending visit of Yawkey to Philadelphia. He is expected here this week-end to talk over contract terms with Foxx and Lefty Grove, the rifle-ball pitcher his cash bought from the Athletics two years ago.

With Foxx, McNair, Cramer and Marcum, the only winning Athletics' pitcher in 1935, all gone, American League fans are mourning over the wreckage. Not a performer is left to the once proud club that ruled the American loop three years and the world for two years at the turn of the decade, and the prospects for 1936 are anything but bright.

Boston End Mystery.

Just who Boston is sending here in return is not known, although it is expected there will be considerable young material coming under the wing of the veteran Mack. But more important to the Athletics right now is the fact that along with these players will also come a sum variously estimated at between $300,000 and half-a-million.

26 Letters Given University City Football Players

Letters were awarded 26 players of University City High School's football squad yesterday at an assembly. Twenty major and six minor letters were given, and 14 class numerals were awarded other members of the squad. C. A. Muhl and Henry Schemmer were the coaches in charge of the Indians during the last season in which they lost only one game to the Miami (Fla.) High eleven.

A vote was held to elect an honorary captain, but as two boys were tied for the honor, and three were absent from the voting, another ballot will be held Monday.

Miami High School's players sent a Christmas present for each of the players, and they were distributed by Dr. Guy Magness during the assembly.

Hunch on Names Nets Women $140 In 50-Cent Pool

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Jan. 4.

FOUR women were richer to the extent of $140 apiece today, because they contributed 50 cents each to play a hunch at Alamo Downs, local racetrack.

It was Barbara Frost who had the hunch. Making her selection for the daily double, she took the cue from her own name, picking Frostbite for the second race and Barbara J. in the third.

Mrs. Edna Cohen, Mrs. Bell Frost and Mrs. Clarence Nordhouse chipped in four bits to make up the required $2 for the mutuel ticket.

The two longshots galloped home in front, and the double paid off $560.10.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—Santa Clara University's basketball team scored with long range shots last night to defeat the University of Nebraska in a fast game, 61 to 48.

EARLY SPEED BRINGS HIM VICTORY IN 10 ROUNDS

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., was back again today, dogging the trail of Tony Canzoneri, lightweight king.

Ambers, whose jaw was broken in a fight with Pritzi Zivic of Pittsburgh six months ago, stepped out of the Madison Square Garden ring last night with a unanimous decision over veteran and ring-wary Frankie Klick of California.

Ambers, who weighed 134½ to 133¾ for his opponent, handed Klick his first defeat in seven Garden starts.

The 8266 customers who paid $18,203 to see the fight at times stamped their feet for action as Ambers won eight of the 10 rounds. He took some pretty stiff punches on his repaired chin in the sixth and seventh rounds, however, and showed there was nothing brittle about it.

To Box Canzoneri for Title.

Ambers' speed in the early rounds tired Klick and sapped him of the energy he usually saves for a stirring finish. Ambers was almost unmarked but Klick had a cut eye and was bleeding from the nose and mouth at the end.

James J. Johnston, Garden matchmaker, announced that Ambers would battle Canzoneri early in the spring.

Klick, holder of the synthetic junior lightweight title, was bothered by Ambers' bouncing, whirlwind style of fighting. His nose was the object of Ambers' pecking, cutting left-hand, and grew to bulbous proportions in the late rounds.

Ambers outboxed and outpunched Klick most of the way and did not seem troubled by Klick's spasmodic flurries to the head and body.

Klick Down for Count.

A right to the jaw floored Klick in the seventh. The coast fighter went down, nose and mouth bleeding badly and took a nine count on one knee. Klick came back strong to take the eighth but was too tired to put up much fight in the closing heats.

In another of the 10-rounders programmed to select a topnotch opponent for the 135-pound crown, Bobby Pacho, California's hard-hitting Mexican, earned a unanimous decision over Leonard del Genio of New York. Pacho staggered the promising Italian with hard rights to the jaw in each of the first three rounds, and dropped Del Genio for a two count in the second.

MRS. MOODY HAS MADE NO PLANS TO PLAY AT WIMBLEDON

RACE

TENNIS QUEEN MAY NOT DEFEND TITLE SHE WON LAST CAMPAIGN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Helen Wills-Moody, "queen of the tennis courts," yesterday indicated she may permanently retire from championship tournament play.

In an interview, Mrs. Moody disclosed she hasn't any plans to return this year to Wimbledon—where she staged her great comeback last year—or to Forest Hills, where she has been absent for two years, or to participate in any tournament whatever.

"Does the lack of tournament plans mean you are retiring from the courts?" she was asked.

"At the moment, I have no plans to play tennis anywhere this year," she said.

Pressed for a direct answer to the question, she said: "I simply haven't made any plans."

"When will you make your plans?"

"I don't know. If I decide to play, I may make up my mind at the last minute."

Mrs. Moody's last reply recalled the mystery of her 1935 plans.

Given an "okay" by her physician after recuperating for 18 months from a back injury suffered at Forest Hills, she secretly boarded a train for New York, en route to Wimbledon. Her 1935 plans, which she made overnight, were not made known until her train was far east of the California line.

Close friends of Mrs. Moody said she has achieved her greatest ambition—to vindicate herself in another match with her noted rival, Helen Hull Jacobs of Berkeley—and they "wouldn't be surprised to see her retire."

Mrs. Moody defaulted to Miss Jacobs in 1933 at Forest Hills after suffering a back injury and while trailing in a hectic title match. Skeptics hinted her injuries were a "convenience" to escape actual defeat at Miss Jacobs' hands.

Her injuries were genuine and her triumph over Miss Jacobs at Wimbledon last summer won the world's plaudits and re-established her as the greatest woman tennis player.

Flyers Will Be Without Matte In Tulsa Match

Although the Flyers have several men on the ailing list and the club has won but one contest in seven starts, Manager Shrimp McPherson was well satisfied after his players went through a brisk skating session and shooting drill yesterday afternoon at the Arena. The Flyers meet the Tulsa Oilers at the Arena tomorrow night.

Joe Matte, defense man, whose eye was badly cut during Sunday night's contest with the Oklahoma Warriors, did not take part in the workout, but after the drill he participated in a skating and stickhandling session. Following his workout he informed Manager McPherson that his vision was not clear and he probably will not play against the Oilers.

Mickey Murray, dependable goaler, showed up nursing a bad cold and was immediately sent home. Other Flyer casualties, Pete Palangio, whose six-inch gash on the back of his head is healing rapidly, and Fido Purpur and Leo Carbol, who were roughed up a bit in St. Paul Wednesday night, showed no ill effects as they worked out.

Ford Frick, President of National League, Pays Tribute to Cubs and Sees "Perfect '36" for Baseball

By Ford Frick,
President, National League.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan 4.—Perspective is building up with each passing month to make that September 21-game winning streak of the Chicago Cubs stand out stronger, taller and brighter against the skyline of the 1935 sports calendar.

We are beginning to realize now that we saw unfolded a page of baseball history in the making. Twenty-one straight victories! From third place to the pennant! The Cubs' conquest of the National League's 1935 championship truly belongs in baseball's gallery of immortal exploits.

It wasn't the longest winning streak in baseball history. The New York Giants of 1916 won 26 in a row, the all-time major league record. Theirs was a September drive, too, but without a pennant as its climax.

As the background builds up around the 1935 season, the picture also suggests the pennant drive of the Boston Braves in 1914. Those Braves under George Stallings' command had no streak as long as 26 or 21 but they charged up the pennant hill all the way from last place.

The Cubs in 1935 weren't dark horses nor did they win as many as 26 straight but to my mind they belong in that very select group with the Braves of 1914 and the Giants of 1916.

Until the Cubs launched their rampage, the St. Louis Cardinals gave every evidence of becoming the headliners of this annual review. In July and August the Cards launched a drive reminiscent of the one that carried them to the pennant and world championship in 1934. In fact, it took something of a history-making nature, such as the Chicago streak, to relegate the Redbirds to second place.

There's a very bright spot in our second division, too—Cincinnati. The Reds won no pennant, but the "last to first" campaign launched by Powel Crosley Jr. and Larry McPhail made remarkable strides.

Brooklyn gave us lots of thrills, too, back there in the spring, and that opening drive of Casey Stengel's men stands as one of our season's bright spots. Pittsburgh provided the chief pitching sensation in the person of Cy Blanton, who wound up the season at the top of the list in the earned run rankings, a most remarkable achievement for a freshman.

Phillies Advance.

Philadelphia, in the second year of Jimmy Wilson's management, made rapid strides toward developing a powerful team. One of the best achievements of the year came right at the close with the reorganization of the Boston Braves. Thanks to Bob Quinn's taking the helm there, the outlook for National League baseball in Boston is very promising.

I think baseball, together with the country as a whole, will enjoy 1936 even more than 1935. All prospects point that way and for our league the year will stand out a bit more prominently from the fact that we celebrate our sixtieth birthday on Feb. 2.

The foundation of major league baseball, as we know it today, dates from Feb. 2, 1876, when the National League was first organized. We hope for and are planning for a sixty-first year which will keep faith with those founders back there in the '70s.

Wrestler Spits in Rival's Face; Texas Grand Jury Takes Up Case

AMARILLO, Tex., Jan. 4.—To the amazement of Journeyman Wrestler Danny McShain, the Potter County grand jury took seriously yesterday the episode that had some 1500 mat fans crying for his blood Thursday night.

Witnesses who declared McShain expectorated tobacco juice in the eyes of Bob Castle, his opponent, appeared before the grand jury.

The district attorney's staff said they were proceeding under a statute prohibiting any "attempt to maim."

McShain denied the accusation.

"I'm not only a good wrestler," he explained, "but a fine gentleman."

Castle, who lost the third fall while writhing in apparent agony, had not been found, although a subpoena was issued for him. The grand jury took no action.

Dutch Mantele, the promoter, said a physician who treated Castle found no indication of lasting injury. Mantell was unsympathetic over Castle's manifestations of pain.

"That's an old gag to save your face in wrestling," he said.

THE Wimbledon, England, tennis club has awarded Helen Jacobs the first honorary membership ever given to anyone who has not won its title, it was learned here yesterday.

ALLISON BEGINS 1936 CAMPAIGN IN FINE STYLE

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—Wilmer Allison, veteran Davis Cup star, opened his 1936 campaign here yesterday with two easy victories in the second annual Sugar Bowl tournament.

Experimenting a bit with his large repertoire of shots, the United States champion swept aside Jack Mooney, Atlanta veteran and former Southern champion, in straight sets, 6—2, 7—5, then came back with another straight-set victory over Robert Lake of Birmingham, 6—4, 6—4.

Hall in Semifinals.

J. Gilbert Hall, East Orange, N. J., seeded No. 2, reached the semifinals along with Allison. Hall won in straight sets, from "Doc" Barr of Dallas, 11—9, 6—4.

Martin Buxby, Miami (Fla.) youngster, displayed nice form in defeating Ernie Sutter of New Orleans, 6—4, 3—6, 7—5, and Hal Surface, Kansas Cityan, seeded No. 3, in three sets, 7—5, 6—8, 6—0.

The other semifinal berth was occupied by Arthur Hendrix of Lakeland, Fla., who furnished the only upset of the day by disposing of Barney Welsh, Washinfton, D. C., National Public Parks singles champion, 6—0, 6—0.

Hendrix disposed of a fellow townsman, Frank Guernsey, in the second round, 7—5, 6—2, and will meet Hall in the semifinals.

Chinese Star Loses.

Guy Cheng, No. 2 man on China's Davis Cup team last year, fell victime to a first-round setback by Lake, while Bob Little, Birmingham; Paul Gooseman, Ed Sutter and Billie Westerfield, all of New Orleans, fell by the wayside in their opening matches.

In the doubles competition, the Sutter brothers won a first-round match over Mooney and Barr, 6—1, 11—9, and Hendrix and Guernsey teamed to defeat Lake and Little in another first-rounder, 6—4, 6—4.

DEMPSEY LIKES M'AVOY; RANKS HIM AT TOP IN TWO DIVISIONS

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—If you want the considered opinion of Jack Dempsey, there are at least four fighters now holding world's championships who shouldn't—and, as time goes on, probably won't. One of them is the obvious selection, a sort of predicted loser-by-acclamation, Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock.

The other three are John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight champion; Babe Risko, middleweight champion, and Freddie Miller, recognized as featherweight champion by the N. B. A.

There is nothing original about the Braddock matter. The only noteworthy dissenters, in fact, are James J. Braddock and Madison Square Garden, the company that holds his paper and, therefore, wishes to deny that Joe Louis will ever beat Braddock out of the title.

McAvoy Tops Two Groups.

Detmpsey, anyhow, quite naturally rates Louis over Braddock and then goes for Jock McAvoy, the Englishman, with considerable gusto. He makes McAvoy the No. 1 man of the light-heavyweights and concedes him the same spot in the middleweight class, provided he can do 160 pounds.

This is a little surprising in view of the prestige of Freddie Steele of the Pacific Northwest, whom everybody around here talks about but never sees.

"I know Steele very well," said Dempsey. "He's an excellent puncher and a very good man. But I like that McAvoy against anybody in both classes, if he can do 160."

Miller Starting to Slip.

As for Miller, who has a sort of second-cousin claim upon the featherweight title, Dempsey figures that Freddie is beginning to go.

"Maybe the altitude of Mexico City helped Baby Casanova to beat him the other day," said John. "But my boy, Norment Quarles, beat him in another over-the-weight-limit fight in Pittsburgh and there's no particular altitude there.

"The fact is that Miller's beginning to slip. I'll leave him at the top of the class temporarily, but he won't be able to stay there himself."

Middleweight—1, Jock McAvoy; 2, Freddie Steele; 3, Marcel Thil, France; 4, Babe Risko; 5, Ken Overlin.

Bantamweight—1, Sixto Escobar; 2, Lou Salica.

SHAW-STEPHENS FIVE'S NEXT FOE HAS SCORED 4229 POINTS IN 4 YEARS

A girls' basketball team ranked on a par with the National Champion Tulsa Stenos—the Chicago Usherettes—will attempt to uphold a remarkable playing record of 139 victories in 145 games, when they play the Shaw-Stephens five at the Maplewood Senior High Gymnasium tomorrow.

This game will be preceded by a men's contest between the St. Louis Mutineers and the Young Democrats of the Muny League. Many former stars of the City and Ozark A. A. U. champion Pabs, including Bobby Bick, Beck and Panos, will be in the Democrats' lineup.

Following the girls' contest, the United Service team of the Muny circuit, composed of many St. Louis stars, will meet the Alexanders.

While winning city and Central A. A. U. titles for three of the past four seasons, the Usherettes rolled up a total of 4229 points, or better than 30 a game, while holding rival clubs to 1419 points, or an average of 11 per contest.

BIG TEN BASKET TITLE RACE TO START, TONIGHT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Big Ten basketball teams, fortified by a huge margin of success over non-conference foes, start taking picks on each other tonight in the opening of the championship schedule.

Illinois, holder of one-third of the 1935 title, meets Iowa at Iowa City, while Wisconsin, owner of another third of last year's honors, plays Ohio State at Columbus.

Purdue Plays Monday.

Purdue, which won the remaining third of the title a year ago, goes into action Monday night at Ohio State.

Minnesota and Northwestern will tie up loose ends of their pre-season schedules, the former meeting Notre Dame at Minneapolis, and Northwestern playing at Marquette.

With Michigan's apparently improved five setting the pace, conference teams turned in 45 victories, lost 13 games, and tied one during the early season. The tie turned up at Northwestern New Year's eve when the Wildcats and Notre Dame had to settle for a 20 to 20 standoff because of an error in scoring.

Michigan won seven straight, while Illinois' veterans checked in with six triumphs in as many starts. Ohio State won four straight. Wisconsin and Indiana each dropped one decision, both losing to De Paul. Northwestern also dropped only one game, bowing to Notre Dame at South Bend in their first meeting.

Four Conference Games.

Four conference battles will be fought Monday night. In addition to Purdue's opener at Ohio State, Indiana meets Michigan at Ann Arbor, Wisconsin plays Chicago at Chicago, and Illinois invades Minnesota.

The record against non-conference opponents:

	W.	L.	Pct.	Pts.	O.P.
Michigan	7	0	1.000	241	168
Illinois	6	0	1.000	238	135
Ohio State	4	0	1.000	182	116
Wisconsin	6	1	.857	212	154

REORGANIZATION OF THE BOSTON A. A. PLANNED

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—The first steps in the reorganization of the famous Boston Athletic Association were taken yesterday when 250 former members elected a slate of officers and absorbed the Unicorn Club.

The latter organization was formed several months ago when the B. A. A. went into bankruptcy and its famous Back Bay clubhouse was sold at public auction.

The organization decided to continue sponsoring the B. A. A. indoor track and field meet, which will be held in the Boston Garden on Feb. 8, and the April 19 marathon from Hopkinton to Boston.

M'NAB MAY BE AT LEFT WING FOR SHAMROCK CLUB TOMORROW

There is a possibility that the Shamrocks will show a changed lineup when the national soccer champions take the field against Heidelberg of Pittsburgh in the third match between the two elevens at Sportsman's Park, tomorrow afternoon.

Willie McLean, star outside left of the local team is on the hospital list and will be out of the lineup for some time. As a result, there is a possibility that Alec McNab, captain of the club, will move to the left wing, with Art Garcia, the young Spaniard, a recent addition to the club, will be at outside right.

McNab, out of the game for several weeks with an injured leg, declared that he has felt no ill effects from his efforts in the New Year's day match and would be able to travel at top speed from now on. "The field was in poor condition," said McNab this morning, "and for a time I was afraid. However, I found my leg in good condition and now I am ready to travel at top speed for the entire 90 minutes."

"It's a fine young team and will give any eleven in the country trouble," commented McNab. "Much of the success is due to the fact that the inside forwards are always back helping out the defense when needed, with the wing forwards and center Donelli always ready to grab a loose ball and start a sally. Donelli, after getting the ball, maneuvers around, shoves the ball to the wing and by this time the insides are up ready to help on attack.

"For some reason we have not been able to show our best against Heidelberg. I hope for a dry field tomorrow and then maybe we will be able to show the fans something," McNab declared.

KANSAS GAINS VICTORY OVER CALIFORNIA FIVE

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4.—In a game marked by many missed shots Kansas defeated the California basketball team here last night, 27 to 18, to sweep a two-game series. The Kansans won the first game, 32 to 28.

splendid to add a Van Mungo, a Bill Lee, or even a Frankhouse to the pitching staff. But it would be a mistake to make that addition at the expense of other departments.

There is one trade that the Cardinals might make that would help the St. Louis team and the Cubs. Charley Grimm said at the December meeting that he was offering Chuck Klein and George Stainback and would consider any sensible offer. It is known that the Cardinals have offered Bill Walker to several clubs and that Bill is not likely to be with the 1936 Redbird team.

Bill is still a good pitcher. He started last year with five straight victories and his string was broken when he lost to Bucky Walters at Philadelphia in a 2—1 or 3—2 game, in which the Cards made only three or four hits. Subsequently Bill ran into misfortune. He was wild at critical times and pitched few complete games after May 1. But his early season contests included several brilliant performances, and it is difficult to believe that he could have lost all his stuff.

The Cardinals always have liked Stainback and perhaps a deal could be arranged. The writer believes the Cubs would profit by the transaction. The addition of Walker to the Chicago staff would do much to bolster Grimm's team, in the only department which he admits he would like to improve.

SPILL ENABLES MRS. SLATER TO WIN ARENA RACE

By Harry McKanna

A spill enabled Mrs. Bee Slater of the Winter Garden skating team, to score her fourth consecutive victory in the city championship series over Miss Elsie Laskowitz, Missouri champion, in the three-fourths mile race at the Arena last night in a resumption of the second half of the series.

Miss Theresa Swetitch, a teammate of Mrs. Slater, setting the pace, fell on the third lap of the nine-lap race and upset Miss Laskowitz. Mrs. Slater in third place, then assumed the lead and won by a wide margin. Miss Laskowitz put on a spurt and gained second place. Miss Theresa Westhus was third. The time was 2:40.4.

Adds 20 Points.

By finishing second, Miss Laskowitz added 20 points to give her a total of 210 and assure her of the city championship for another year. Mrs. Slater brought her point total to 180.

John Bretz, of the Winter Garden team, took the lead in the race for the men's city championship, when he won the half-mile feature in 1:28.2. Lamar Ottsen, of the Arena A. C., who won his fourth consecutive Missouri championship in the Silver Skates carnival last Sunday, was a victim of hard luck. With three laps to go, Ottsen was back of Weber Ley, his teammate, when Ley lost his balance and threw Ottsen off his stride, Bretz increasing his lead. Ottsen came in second to bring his point total to 130 and tie Ley for second place while Bretz gained 30 points by his victory and brought his point standing to 150. Bretz was clocked in 1:28.2.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Jan. 4. The Cape Girardeau Teachers easily subdu an outclassed quintet from Centenary College of Shreveport, La., 43 to 23, in an intersectional basketball game last night.

The Teachers scored first and never relinquished the lead. They ran up an early 14 to 2 advantage and were in front 28—11 at the half.

The game was roughly played with 30 fouls called on the two teams.

Gerald Millard, Centenary center, and Lloyd McDowell, Cape's free-scoring forward, tied for individual honors with 10 points each. McDowell sank five field goals while Millard tallied two goals from the floor and six free throws.

CLEVELAND AND M'BRIDE LOSE TO EAST SIDERS

Collinsville's Kahoks defeated McBride, 26 to 17, while Wood River's Oilers downed Cleveland's quintet, 26 to 16, in the features of last night's five-game basketball program on the East Side. Tonight's three games pit McKendree College of Lebanon against Centenary College of Shreveport, La., in the outstanding contest. The feature game will be contested at the Landsdowne gymnasium, in East St. Louis, starting at 8:15 o'clock.

Coach Stephan Kole's Edwardsville Tigers gained their eighth consecutive victory, defeating Gillespie, 36 to 16. Belleville just lasted to take a 27-23 decision from Cathedral High of Belleville in the first of their city series, while Troy proved much the best in a game with Trenton, taking a 35-to-14 verdict.

The outstanding contest saw Bill Larson's Collinsville quintet come from behind in the third quarter, after maintaining a 9-8 lead at the half, to overcome McBride's 15-14 lead and go on to win. Led by Myron Counsil and Rudy Mihalich, Wood River's Oilers were able to turn back Cleveland. Counsil and Mihalich counted nine markers each. Wood River held a 13-12 lead at the half mark.

Due to the importance of the McKendree-Centenary game, the contest will be played in East St. Louis. It will give East St. Louisans their first opportunity to witness a collegiate basketball contest. Kenneth "Spike" Wilson of Granite City, McKendree's brilliant star for the past four years in football and basketball, will be awarded a trophy given each year to the outstanding senior in the Illinois Intercollegiate conference.

Other games tonight finds Edwardsville's Tigers seeking their ninth triumph in a battle with a Big Twelve foe, Champaign, at Edwardsville, while Belleville's Maroons engage Lebanon's Greyhounds.

ST. JOSEPH ASKED TO EXPLAIN PLAYER DEAL

DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 4.—President W. G. Bramham of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues revealed yesterday that he had called upon Frank Haley, president of the St. Joseph club in the Western League, to explain his disposal of Catcher Earle Brucker, 1935 batting king of the circuit.

Bramham said records in his office showed Brucker was sold by Haley to Portland of the Pacific Coast League last Nov. 22. Later, he said, an outright release to the player from Haley, dated Dec. 1, was received.

As a result, Brucker's status is in doubt, and until it is determined whether he is a free agent or property of Portland, Bramham announced, the Nov. 22 sale would not be approved.

OKLAHOMA AND MISSOURI OPEN BIG SIX SEASON

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 4.—A Big Six conference basketball race which has more possibilities than a Kentucky Derby opens tonight at Columbia, Mo., as George Edwards sends his Missouri Tigers into action against Oklahoma.

On paper the Oklahomans figure to win, but inasmuch as the game won't be played on paper, such figuring must be discounted, particularly when the site of the game is considered. Missouri at Missouri often is the same as a volley at daybreak for favored invading teams.

A Final Tuneup.

The Sooners took their final tuneup Thursday night, incidentally taking Wichita University, 40 to 37. Missouri has had no competition since the four-team tournament at Kansas City, from which the Tigers emerged by the back door with two defeats.

Edwards has been pessimistic over his team's showing in practice, finally deciding that rest was needed. He ordered the players not to even look at a basket until tonight, which refutes the impression they had not been looking at the basket in some time. Against Southern California they registered only three field goals.

Missouri will be handicapped seriously by the absence of Carmin Henderson, big center, who is an invalid temporarily. Oklahoma, it was believed, would be going around without guards as a result of the graduation of Omar Browning and Stan Tyler, but Jay Thomas, John Remy and Bill Martin have been filling in nicely.

Although Missouri cannot be counted out of the race as long as Edwards is head man, at present the Tigers rate as the minor public enemy so far as the other schools are concerned.

Dr. F. C. (Phog) Allen's "Little Giants" of Kansas, on their showing in pre-campaign games, stand out like a Christmas necktie. The defending champion, Iowa State quintet, rated as a foursome as a result of the graduation of Waldo Wegner, gangling center, showed what might be expected of it when it soundly trounced Vanderbilt, a good Southern team. In Jack Flemming and Jack Cowen, Coach Louis Menze has a pair of jacks which will take many a pot.

The Kansas State quintet, despite its defeat by Kansas in the Kansas City tournament, is not to be confused with the Dionne quintuplets. Frank Root has a big, rangy squad which showed on its Western tour it could add by twos faster than most teams. In Frank Groves, Kansas State has a center difficult to handcuff.

A better line on Oklahoma will be available after the game tonight. However, Hugh McDermott has 11 men six feet tall or more, which is a fair start toward a basketball team.

As for Nebraska, the Cornhuskers loom as public enemy No. 1. Coach W. Harold Browne, after several years of trying to make tall scores with short men, finally has a squad which appears to have everything. The Nebraskans, with four men towering six feet four inches or more, averaged approximately 45 points in their first five games. The Husker defense appeared rather leaky, but a team which averages 45 points could use sieves at the guards and still win most of its games.

Kansas and Kansas State will be the next starters in the conference race following tonight's game. The Kansas quintets meet at Manhattan next Tuesday.

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT HELD FOR MURDER IN OKLAHOMA

Claude Pinkerton Charged With Shooting Negro Teacher to Death in 1934.

MUSKOGEE, Ok., Jan. 4.—Claude Pinkerton, Superintendent of Schools at Oktaha, who already was held on a robbery charge in a different case, was charged with murder yesterday after a ballistics check up of his revolver with the bullets that killed Alonzo Ashley, Negro, in Muskogee, Dec. 8, 1934.

Detective Chief Ralph Rose said, Ashley, a school teacher, was killed by a white man who called him to his automobile, then shot him three times. Police Capt. Clarence Turner said he took a pistol from Pinkerton's automobile after Pinkerton was charged with the holdup and that the weapon and bullets from Ashley's body were sent to a ballistics expert.

An Offi

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

THIS is the social season, so of necessity, most of my news will be on social events. Last night we gave the second big official dinner of the year. It was held in honor of the Vice-President.

To this dinner, came high ranking members of both political parties in the Senate and House of Representatives, and so the Vice-President sat on my right, and Senator Borah on my left.

There were 88 at dinner, and as the table is a large horse-shoe, the Vice-President and I had to go completely round one end in order to reach our seats opposite my husband.

We had hardly seated ourselves when, with a wicked twinkle, my husband leaned forward to murmur a few things about candidacies to my left hand neighbor.

As one woman said to me afterwards, it was a friendly dinner — everyone seemed to like his neighbor.

Ambassador and Mrs. Daniels were back from Mexico and staying with us. Sir Arthur and Lady Willert, who spent many years in Washington when he was correspondent for the London Times, were also staying with us.

He has served many years in the Foreign Office in London. There were many to greet them warmly on their reappearance even here where people are quickly forgotten because they change so often.

The evening was made particularly pleasant by the artists. Lily Pons looked exquisite and sang beautifully. Mr. Totenberg played delightfully. Cornelia Otis Skinner could not have done her monologue on "A Nebraskan Being Presented at Court" to a more appreciative audience. There were guffaws from the men all over the room.

There were some 500 people to tea today and a luncheon with Mrs. Hull, wife of the Secretary of State.

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE.
(Copyright, 1936.)

NEW JERSEY says the execution of Hauptmann, close at hand, will be no theatrical show. No woman reporter will be allowed to witness Hauptmann's death, an excellent idea, although some young ladies will not think so. Women reporters, let us hope, will have babies later on. Watching a miserable creature writhing in the electric chair would not be good for the babies, although science no longer believes in prenatal influence, as Voltaire did.

In his philosophical dictionary he asserts positively that a woman was frightened by a queer little performing dog, hopping around on its hind legs, just before her baby was born, and that the baby looked exactly like the little dog.

Fifty-two representatives of news and photography companies discussed the execution with Col. Kimberling, principal keeper of the prison, as they might have discussed plans for an inauguration ball.

Great news services will be present as a matter of course. The jury of twelve acting as witnesses will all be newspaper men.

No broadcasting will be permitted from prison premises. It may be radio waves leaving our thick lower atmosphere travel on to other planets. Even so those other planets would be little interested in the Hauptmann performance.

The spirit of man, since it must travel through space, at least nine hundred million times six trillion miles before it can escape from this universe will need high speed "going home," far faster than light, 186,000 miles a second. Think of spending 900,000,000 years on the way to heaven—you would forget who you were, when you started.

The news that we read from day to day is usually "chicken feed" of history, amounting to little, but the dispatch from Indio, Cal., is important to the world and an honor to men who think and to their ability to control their destinies.

Two thousand feet underground 400 pounds of dynamite knocked out five feet of granite and united two sections of a tunnel, longest in the world for its diameter. That tunnel, part of the East Coachella tube, is one of 37 tunnels that will take wa-

The spirit of man, since it must travel through space, at least nine hundred million times six trillion miles before it can escape from this universe will need high speed "going home," far faster than light, 186,000 miles a second. Think of spending 900,000,000 years on the way to heaven—you would forget who you were, when you started.

The news that we read from day to day is usually "chicken feed" of history, amounting to little, but the dispatch from Indio, Cal., is important to the world and an honor to men who think and to their ability to control their destinies.

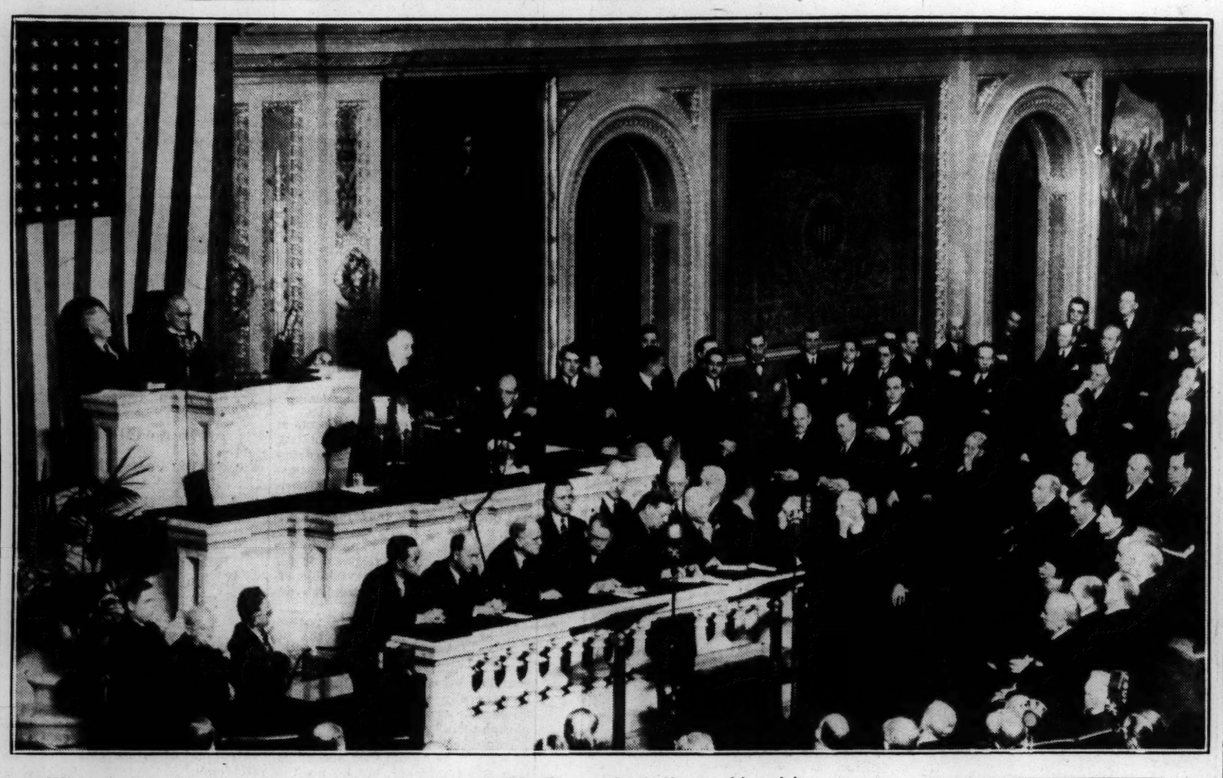

Two thousand feet underground 400 pounds of dynamite knocked out five feet of granite and united two sections of a tunnel, longest in the world for its diameter. That tunnel, part of the East Coachella tube, is one of 37 tunnels that will take wa-

An Unlucky Declarer

By Ely Culbertson

Ely Culbertson

EVERY bridge player of experience will quail with horror of today's tale. Even the most goulish should find sympathy for a declarer who, on a reasonably sound three no trump bid, failed to take a single trick. Particularly so, when the opening lead alone was responsible for a swing of eight tricks.

West, dealer.

	♠6 3 ♥6 5 4 3 2 ♦8 6 5 ♣7 4 3
♠A 7 4 ♥J 10 9 ♦10 7 ♣A 10 6 5 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠Q J 10 8 5 ♥A Q 7 ♦4 ♣Q J 9
	♠K 9 ♥K 8 ♦A K Q J 9 3 2 ♣K 8

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 spade	3 no trump
Double (final bid)

It is hard to criticise South's three no trump bid. Granted that it was aggressive, but the freak holding, and the apparent assurance of at least eight tricks, make this bid extremely tempting. Certainly, South could not anticipate a calamity and, even when doubled by West, he should not be severely censured for sticking to his guns.

• • •

THE villain of the plot was West, who failed to open his partner's bid-suit. Instead, feeling that South was prepared for a spade opening, he "crossed him" by leading the jack of hearts. East played the ace, and led the spade queen through. West's ace smothered the king and a spade was returned. After running his six spades, East shifted to the club queen, and the carnage continued. West merrily ran his five clubs and, on the last card, poor South, who was completely groggy, guessed the wrong card to hold—he had to let go either the heart king or the diamond ace.

And, to cap the climax, while the 2600 point penalty was being entered, West observed suavely: "Too bad we don't get credit for a grand slam!"

An observation that should have been punished with boiling oil!

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Will you be kind enough to advise the correct bidding of this hand, to settle a friendly argument? The opponents made no bid:

North	South
♠K Q 5	♠A 3
♥K Q J 9 5	♥A 10 6 4 3

North	South
1 heart	3 diamonds
3 hearts	4 no trump
5 diamonds	6 hearts

A PETITE VIRTUOSO of the 'CELLO

Raya Garbousova at 25 Has Achieved an International Reputation

By Marguerite Martyn

RAYA GARBOUSOVA.

WHAT is she like off the stage, this Raya Garbousova?

That's almost as big an order as our music critic has to fill in telling you how she played the 'cello with the Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon. For she may be the rarest of women 'cello players but, also, she has a lot of what is known as personality. Just from Los Angeles in her first complete tour of this country, it's a wonder to me the movie scouts didn't grab her off. She is young and blonde and beautiful, petite and shapely, and a foreigner. Yet she says she met only music enthusiasts in California. That's explained by the fact that when asked what she prefers to do when not working at her profession, what are her diversions, fads, recreations, she replies, "More music. I can come home dead tired from a concert, then there is nothing I enjoy more than finding a trio or a quartet and having a little chamber music." Thus for all the personality, she refuses to step out of character as a musician.

Young—she is 25 with an established European reputation already behind her. Small—she is barely as tall as the instrument with which she performs her wonders. Blonde—her hair is like spun gold. Eyes are intensely blue and a generous mouth smiles most of the time when it is not actually laughing. Oh, she can grow suddenly sad when she talks of her exiled countrymen, "Three hundred thousand Russians in Paris alone! At first they were so courageous, but now, so many of them, having overstayed their passport visas and finding state barriers closed to them on all sides, are committing suicide." But her prevailing mood is vivacious good humor.

Her greatest accomplishment aside from her musicianship is telling funny stories of which she has a large repertory, according to Vladimir Golschmann who is her host as well as her director with the orchestra here this week.

"Don't tell that on me," she appealed to him. "I once knew a 'cellist who had also a reputation as a story teller. He would be invited where he was expected to tell stories. If he brought his 'cello along, other guests would sigh, so disappointed, 'Oh, is he a 'cellist?' I should not like that to happen to me."

She was born in Tiflis in the Caucasus Mountains. "One hundred per cent Russian," she announced, not without appreciation of the colloquialism. "Am I not learning to speak American? In Georgia we have families of the longest Russian lineage."

"Every other man is 'Prince' instead of 'Mr.'" contributed Mr. Golschmann.

"That is not a joke," responded Miss Garbousova. "Our exports in princes may be numerous and rather famous, but we have families much older and with many more princes than the Mdivanis. I grew up amid mountains, snows, scenes of marvelous grandeur, where poetry and music are the daily bread of the people."

"You must find it very different in America," it was suggested.

"Excuse me, I must contradict you," she replied. "I find American people very comprehending of music. I can tell if they listen. When I am playing pianissimo I listen. Many times it is so still you cannot hear a fly flying. Of course, if there is some slip and I hear somebody snore, I make the fortissimo very quickly.

"Wherever I am, if I have success, I like the country. When you hear a musician say, 'I like this town, I do not like that country,' it is because he has had good success or bad success in this town or that country."

As far back as she can remember her life has been interwoven with music. Her father was, and still is, a professor of the Tiflis Conservatory. At the age of six she was already skillful at the piano. Then she heard Serge Koussevitzky, the great double bass virtuoso.

"Since that day," she related, "the idea possessed me, I must play as well as he on an instrument similar to his. I thought of the 'cello as not too big but it was a long time before I could convince my father to let me play it. Finally, on my seventh birthday, I was given a 'cello. It was bought for one dollar and was an antiquated instrument but I was so overjoyed, soon they could not tear me away from it, not even for mealtime. Finally my family overcame this difficulty because the 'cello would need to be tuned and I was not strong enough to do it by myself. They refused to help me until I was through a meal."

At the age of nine she was admitted to the State conservatory in the 'cello class. When she was barely 14 she was graduated with high honors and sent to Moscow as the State of Georgia's musical prodigy. Then to Leningrad and on a tour through Russia. In 1925 she began tours through Europe where she has played with famous orchestras in the capitals of almost every country. In Spain she came under the patronage of Pablo Casals, said to be the greatest 'cellist of modern times, and last September played with the Barcelona Symphony Orchestra with this veteran virtuoso as conductor.

Asked if she belong to the Communist party of Soviet Russia, she whispered behind her hand, "Sh! I belong to music, not to politics. I have been much rejoiced, however, when I have returned to Russia to find great progress and much interest in all the arts, in painting and literature as well as music."

• • •

She is the guest while here of Mr. and Mrs. Golschmann whom she knew in Paris, very much their guest in their suite at the Coronado, since, due to failure to make a room reservation for her before the hotel was crowded to overflowing with convention guests, a separate room was not available for her. Speaking of scientists and their convention, she was reminded of how in Berlin Professor Albert Einstein, was one of her old play fellows at her favorite diversion, chamber music. "He is quite a good violinist and so simple and so kind," remarked Garbousova. "I met him when first I was in Berlin. That was when I was very poor. Then I went to Paris and had a successful concert and the first thing I did was to buy for myself some pretty dresses. Next time I saw him, he did not recognize me. Meeting him after a concert, I had to recall myself to him. 'Garbousova?' he said peering at me. 'Why it's little Raya.' Then he chuckled, 'I never should have known you in all your fine clothes.'"

A Resume of Medical Work In Past Year

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

IN LOOKING over the year books which record the work which has been reported in the departments of medicine in 1935, we find that no very startling changes have been made in the last year.

Dr. Clendening

The outposts of advance in medicine in the last 35 years have been (1) the control of the infectious diseases, (2) the vitamins, (3) ductless glands, (4) allergy, (5) diabetes, (6) pernicious anemia. (7) X-ray and radium.

What has the last year brought?

(1) Infectious diseases: Common cold. The virus has been isolated. (Dochez to the New York Academy of Medicine). But contrary to newspaper reports no vaccine has been made, but the isolation of the virus has opened up the field for the future.

Diphtheria. More campaigns for immunization. Still responsible for thousands of deaths. Available effective methods of control are deplorably neglected.

Encephalitis. We are in possession of the full reports of the St. Louis epidemic. It was comparatively a mild form of disease, resembling an epidemic in Japan, and is generally known among epidemiologists as the "St. Louis type of encephalitis."

Infantile Paralysis. A great deal of work is being done on immunization and treatment, but no positive conclusions point to any single method, either of treatment or prevention, which is definitely established.

Influenza. The filterable virus grown in tissue cultures. Preventive vaccination a possibility. Defeating a repetition of such an epidemic as 1918-1920.

Vitamin B Isolated.

2. Vitamins: Isolation of Vitamin B in pure form. Prevention of alcoholic neuritis by Vitamin B. Influence of Vitamin G and D on nail growth.

3. Ductless glands. Antuitrin "S" is acne.

4. Allergy: Allergic headache. Thinking there was a brain tumor a headache patient's skull was opened by a surgeon. The opening can be observed to swell whenever the patient eats food to which he is sensitive.

7. X-ray and radium. Thorotrast to outline nervous system, liver and spleen.

Heart disease has naturally received a great deal of attention in view of the remarkable increase in deaths attributable to these conditions. The obituary columns of the newspapers have contained notice after notice of prominent and useful men, in the prime of life, who have succumbed suddenly to heart disease. Many of these have been prominent members of the medical profession. There is no subject in which physicians are more interested today. Definite progress has been made in the diagnosis, especially by the instrumental means, the electro-cardiograph, of the exact location of the changes in the heart which cause this distressing mortality.

In the field of digestive disorders, the use of the photographic gastroscope to record photographs of the inside of the stomach has been the most spectacular development. The digestibility of various foodstuffs, by using the X-ray, has also been of great interest.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instruction for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

PROBLEM CHILD NO. 400

There's nothing new beneath the sun.
Each day she has her lunch at one,
Her cocktail hour begins at four—
And then there isn't any more
To do till dinner.

She never eats, but always dines,
And drinks the very choicest wines;
She's up until the next day dawns,
With aching head, and stifled yawns—
She's a member of satiety.

Dr. Laird, of Colgate, famous authority on sleep, has concluded experiments which show man thinks better with his feet elevated, or when he gets down on all fours.

It may be necessary to change the laws—and require voters to crawl to the polls on their hands and knees.

Of course, the Bureaucrats and elected officials have apparently known for years that the proper stance is to have the feet elevated—desk high.

OTHERWISE THE CAR IS OKAY

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

Judge Bell of the County Court collided with a car without a tail light on 165 miles west of Lamar, Thursday night. The car belonged to a Pittsburg piano tuner named Gilbert, who says his car has no gas feed from the rear tank to the carburetor. So he has to stop on the road frequently and go back to the tank, draw some gas and fill up the carburetor. The judge thinks that if there is any way to do it the driver of the car he struck should be made to repair the Judge's car.

Trans-Pacific Flight Covers Highly Prized

Only 3543 Sets Exist—Scarcity Raises Price to $35 Each.

THE demand for the covers from the first flight across the Pacific Ocean of the Philippine Clipper greatly exceeds the supply of these covers. A great number of collectors failed to place orders for these covers and very few dealers stocked up on them.

The official figures of the Postoffice Department show that only 3543 complete sets of the covers exist. Those which are available to purchasers are bringing $35 per set and over. According to the official figures the following quantity of covers were mailed from the various points! From San Francisco to Honolulu, 46,561; San Francisco to Guam, 19,958; San Francisco to Manila, 44,346; Hawaii to Guam, 6430; Hawaii to Manila, 6968; Guam to Manila, 5700; Guam to Honolulu, 3543; Guam to San Francisco, 6476. The figures for the eastbound flight from Manila and Honolulu are not available as yet.

The recent announcement of the Postoffice Department that only 324,000 of the 1933 Zeppelin stamps had been sold by the Department caused quite a bit of action in the sales of these stamps. The price of these stamps has practically doubled within the past few weeks.

The date of the first day sale of the Texas Commemorative stamp has been tentatively set for March 15.

The commemorative stamp for the Centennial of the State of Arkansas will be released June 15. The design most popular at the present time is a reproduction of the State War Memorial of Arkansas.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl who was just 15 years old in November. My mother thinks I am too young to go out on dates. She said that in her day girls did not go out until they were 19 or 20 years old. Mrs. Carr, the girls of that day were so dumb that they didn't know how to take care of themselves and had to be kept at home.

Now, Mrs. Carr, please give me your true opinion. All the girls are having dates and it makes a girl feel ridiculous to be tied to her mother's apron strings. To forbid a girl to go out will result in worse fear than parents may realize. Most of the time it makes a girl a liar and a cheat. She fibs about where she goes and goes on blind dates, and meets the boys on the corner when they cannot come to her house. So, in all, you cannot keep your daughter from seeing boys.

Another thing is, all girls of 14, 15, 16 are boy-crazy. The only way to have the girls take the boys calmly is to let her associate with them freely. This makes all boys seem the same and nothing to get excited over.

So, mothers, when your daughters want to go with a boy to the movies, you mothers are wise if you are not too strict.

Please print this letter, Mrs. Carr. I do hope the mothers take it into consideration. What do you think, Mrs. Carr?

THE WALL-FLOWER.

If you have been reading my column, you will know pretty well what I think, and I am afraid some of it may not be just what you want me to say.

There is merit in some of your ideas, but much prejudice and inexperience; some under-done conclusions and not a little exaggeration. We expect these things from those who know so little, as yet, of life and the causes underneath rules which they resent. And you are resenting conventions and customs which are made for your protection, for, although you are like 100,000,000 other youngsters who think they can drive their cars on a railroad track and can meet the engine head-on, you resent the "Danger" sign and wonder how the train could be so dumb. You still must have guidance and take it with good grace. You are too young for a chauffer's license—resent it if you like; but you have to abide by it, because that law, also was made for your protection, though, of course, you think you are too smart to need it.

But I think, with you, that you should be allowed to go with the boys some—in the right way, at the right time and to the right places. Adolescents of the ages you mention are not usually satisfied to have pleasures and amusements reasonably; if they are "allowed to one mile," they usually want to go two. If parents allow them to go out with a group of boys and girls Saturdays and Sunday nights when it does not interfere with school or health, they are not satisfied; and if they have permission to stay until 12, they are being "bossed" and coerced and can "have no fun" unless they remain until 2 or later.

You must remember that there are many parents who have little forethought and no judgment. It is less trouble to let their children run wild. They do not want to be bothered. Which type do you think care the most for their children? As to girls of other days being "too dumb"—they are the same "yesterday, today and forever." The only difference is, that those who were boy-crazy too early and flew around too young were called "college widows" and "old maids" before they had really enjoyed the young pleasures they were entitled to.

• • •

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WOULD like your advice on a problem I have. I have two children, a boy and girl, 12 and 15 years old. They get along so badly. They quarrel so much and do not want to be together. I'm disappointed in them. I wanted them to be real "buddies" and companions to each other.

Is there anything I can do to help change their attitude?

ANXIOUS MOTHER.

I believe your children will get over this stage. Often at their ages there is more or less contention over the "rights" of the boy and the girl. Perhaps you might interest them in something they could do together and with other children. Enlist the help, confidentially of one of their young friends, and if you know some other sister and brother their age who enjoy each other and get along well, invite them to your house, but do not "point with pride" exactly. Let them see the difference and advantages of harmony.

• • •

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I am just a 17-year-old high school girl, and I really don't mind standing up in the street cars and busses. But it simply riles me to see high school boys and young men holding all the seats while there are old ladies standing up.

The school I attend is for girls only. We were spoken to about the lack of politeness on the street cars, and were advised to give our seats to the older people. Perhaps we did not realize just how impolite we had been, but there was a

Bright Fabric In the Styles From London

By Millie Hudson

LONDON, Jan. 3.

Popular materials of the moment that give this effect are lames and multi-colored lame-brocades, scintillating velvets, sequin covered fabrics, lacquered cloths, shot moires and materials that look like the tinfoil used for candy wrappings.

To add to the gleam, embroidering and trimmings are carried out in diamante and crystals, glittering stones and gold and silver stars and spangles.

Huge collars are lined with shining lame, and accessories match. Colored plumes are worn in headdresses pinned with diamond ornaments, or jeweled combs are used as hair ornaments.

A dashing ensemble comprises a skirt of silver lame, and a coat, flared and with deep cavalier cuffs, which is in gold and silver lame. A silver sequin dress has a red shot gold lacquered sash and matching coat. Another sequin dress is in mother-of-pearl tints.

A renaissance model is of seagreen and silver shot moire and has very wide sleeves which narrow toward the wrist. A matching halo cap is made of the material twisted together like rope. Scintillating velvet suits have revers, belts and shoulder-straps embroidered with colored stones.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl who was just 15 years old in November. My mother thinks I am too young to go out on dates. She said that in her day girls did not go out until they were 19 or 20 years old. Mrs. Carr, the girls of that day were so dumb that they didn't know how to take care of themselves and had to be kept at home.

Now, Mrs. Carr, please give me your true opinion. All the girls are having dates and it makes a girl feel ridiculous to be tied to her mother's apron strings. To forbid a girl to go out will result in worse fear than parents may realize. Most of the time it makes a girl a liar and a cheat. She fibs about where she goes and goes on blind dates, and meets the boys on the corner when they cannot come to her house. So, in all, you cannot keep your daughter from seeing boys.

Another thing is, all girls of 14, 15, 16 are boy-crazy. The only way to have the girls take the boys calmly is to let her associate with them freely. This makes all boys seem the same and nothing to get excited over.

So, mothers, when your daughters want to go with a boy to the movies, you mothers are wise if you are not too strict.

Please print this letter, Mrs. Carr. I do hope the mothers take it into consideration. What do you think, Mrs. Carr?

THE WALL-FLOWER.

If you have been reading my column, you will know pretty well what I think, and I am afraid some of it may not be just what you want me to say.

There is merit in some of your ideas, but much prejudice and inexperience; some under-done conclusions and not a little exaggeration. We expect these things from those who know so little, as yet, of life and the causes underneath rules which they resent. And you are resenting conventions and customs which are made for your protection, for, although you are like 100,000,000 other youngsters who think they can drive their cars on a railroad track and can meet the engine head-on, you resent the "Danger" sign and wonder how the train could be so dumb. You still must have guidance and take it with good grace. You are too young for a chauffer's license—resent it if you like; but you have to abide by it, because that law, also was made for your protection, though, of course, you think you are too smart to need it.

But I think, with you, that you should be allowed to go with the boys some—in the right way, at the right time and to the right places. Adolescents of the ages you mention are not usually satisfied to have pleasures and amusements reasonably; if they are "allowed to one mile," they usually want to go two. If parents allow them to go out with a group of boys and girls Saturdays and Sunday nights when it does not interfere with school or health, they are not satisfied; and if they have permission to stay until 12, they are being "bossed" and coerced and can "have no fun" unless they remain until 2 or later.

You must remember that there are many parents who have little forethought and no judgment. It is less trouble to let their children run wild. They do not want to be bothered. Which type do you think care the most for their children? As to girls of other days being "too dumb"—they are the same "yesterday, today and forever." The only difference is, that those who were boy-crazy too early and flew around too young were called "college widows" and "old maids" before they had really enjoyed the young pleasures they were entitled to.

• • •

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WOULD like your advice on a problem I have. I have two children, a boy and girl, 12 and 15 years old. They get along so badly. They quarrel so much and do not want to be together. I'm disappointed in them. I wanted them to be real "buddies" and companions to each other.

Is there anything I can do to help change their attitude?

ANXIOUS MOTHER.

I believe your children will get over this stage. Often at their ages there is more or less contention over the "rights" of the boy and the girl. Perhaps you might interest them in something they could do together and with other children. Enlist the help, confidentially of one of their young friends, and if you know some other sister and brother their age who enjoy each other and get along well, invite them to your house, but do not "point with pride" exactly. Let them see the difference and advantages of harmony.

• • •

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I am just a 17-year-old high school girl, and I really don't mind standing up in the street cars and busses. But it simply riles me to see high school boys and young men holding all the seats while there are old ladies standing up.

The school I attend is for girls only. We were spoken to about the lack of politeness on the street cars, and were advised to give our seats to the older people. Perhaps we did not realize just how impolite we had been, but there was a marked improvement after our faults were pointed out to us. Now, nearly every morning it is a common sight on the street cars and busses leading to our school to see young girls offering their seats to older people.

Nevertheless the young men in the city are evidently a bunch of nincompoops for every one of them sits in his seat like a bump on a log, and I've yet to see one of them offer his seat to an older person.

I suggest that they wake up and acquire a little respect for womanhood and, in fact, all older people.

A YOUNG GIRL.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Frankness as One Cure for Domestic Ills

A Suggestion That Rudeness Causes More Trouble Than In-Laws.

By Elsie Robinson

"DON'T LIVE WITH YOUR IN-LAWS!"

There's a New Year resolution that would be cheered by practically every American family.

Elsie Robinson

A fact which the Bernarr Macfadden Foundation discovered when it started to take a national poll of ideas as to what constitutes Ideal Marriage. Whereupon it immediately became apparent that most of us believe emphatically that IN-LAWS DON'T.

Oregon's report was typical, with a decision of 34 to one against Dear Mama et al. All votes being based on experience, according to their registrants' red hot avowal. With side remarks which this paper didn't print.

So there you have our All American decision on the In-Law question. But why? Why should ladies and gentlemen who are considered charming and useful citizens in their public lives, invariably be regarded as Animated Earaches in their private capacity—particularly if we have to offer 'em the Spare Room or Wall Bed until Al gets another job? What's there so innately mean, mischievous, malignant, baleful, burdensome, base, detestable, depraved, damnable, poisonous, pernicious and generally pesty about being an In-Law?

THERE ISN'T.

The fault lies not in the role itself, nor even in the unfortunate person who must fill it, but in the way we handle it.

The In-Law problem is all-of-a-piece with our other domestic problems, and its misery traceable to the same cause. Marriage, with or without In-Laws, undoubtedly inspires and alibis more rudeness and unfairness than any other racket on earth—and results in more bitterness, self-pity and general demoralization.

• • •

THERE is no degree of meddling, bullying, double-crossing, tale-bearing or torturing which we will not commit in the name of love. No form of malicious maneuvering which we do not sanctify in the name of Home Sweet Home. No police court Third Degree is more cruel than the noisiness of the average family. No criminal as conscientious in Getting His Own Way as a Dear Relation.

If we were one-hundredth part as ruthless to the passing stranger as we are to our Nearest and Dearest, we'd wake up in an ambulance. And deserve to!

Nor is rudeness the worst part of our private program. Our dishonesty to each other is even more demoralizing than our boorishness. If there's one place where courageous honesty is most needed, it is in the home. The enforced intimacy of family life enforces conditions which may become appalling unless handled frankly. Yet there's probably less honesty, more cowardice in homes than in any other spot on earth. And the lovinger, the lyinger!

It's the greater pity, because most of our domestic misery could be prevented or cured by straight talk. If we were as frank with each other as we are with any stranger or fellow worker we could easily iron out any difficulty. And as easily rid ourselves of downright parasites and nuisances. There might, it is true, be a few tears or pouts at first, but there would be immeasurably less conflict in the end—and immeasurably more respect and loving kindness.

Just tell the Other Fellow when and where to head in . . . and listen amiably when he tells us the same. Surely that's not a difficult program. But it's beyond us. Try as we will, we can't nerve ourselves to speak the simple truth with those who share our bed and board. So we go on bullying and bleating, lying and lamenting—

And blaming it on the In-Laws!

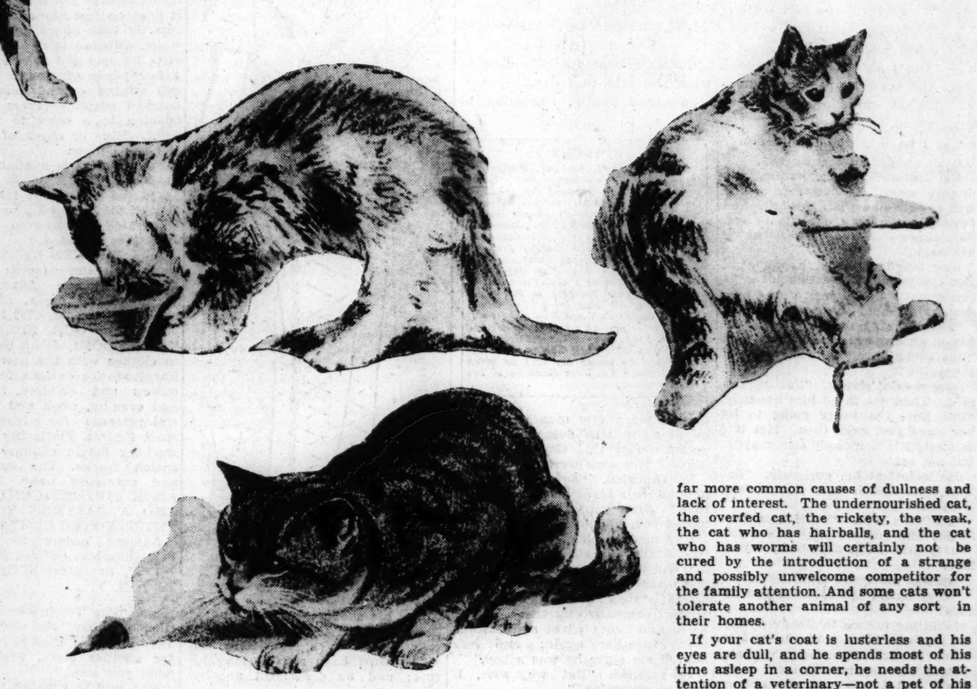

PHOOEY!

When the Cat Grows Listless

A cat needs some cat hobby to keep it contented. Then, if listlessness persists, you'd better make sure that its teeth and its diet are all right.

By PEGGY VON DER GOLTZ

JERRY was born in a bureau drawer. Just show the slightest interest in him and that particular drawer will be pulled open . . . "It was just like that—all full of underwear and things. . . . How she ever got into it. . . . ?" But Jerry's mother must have had talents of a sort—though she was just a dejected vagrant who wandered in from the street, had her kittens amid the lingerie, weaned them, and went her way—for Jerry is a superior cat. True, he has traveled to California, has lived in Paris, has chased crickets on Cape Cod, and considers himself an authority on Long Island sand fleas; and of course travel broadens the mind; but Jerry's genius for teaching surprised even his admiring owners when it became apparent.

Jerry celebrated his eleventh birthday last spring; and as his friends watched him deliberately and daintily nibbling his birthday cake of ground raw beef, shoving aside the asparagus tip candles that decorated it, they thought they noticed a trace of boredom in his gentle aloofness. And they were sure when he politely squeaked his new rubber mouse once and then ignored it. They tried to tempt him with toys for a while. But plainly Jerry wasn't interested. "He's getting old," they said at last, and said it sadly for they loved him.

Then one hot night, coming home from the movies, they met Tony. He was moseying along the street, hungry and aimless, and so weak that his scrawny little body swayed from side to side at every step; but he was not yet convinced that there was no place for him in the world.

He looked up at the sound of footsteps and miaoued hopefully, then crouched for a dash into the road in case they should kick. Young as he was, Tony knew something about people. But these were odd ones. They stooped down and made themselves very small, and called Kitty-Kitty-Kitty! in an irresistible tone. When Tony ventured near enough the man swooped him up in his arms, and, though the kitten bit and tried to scratch, held him fast.

"Disgraceful," they were saying, "to turn a tiny kitten like this out to starve!" . . . "It's not decent!"

Tony wailed at the sound of their angry voices. But the man just held him tighter, as they turned into the house.

They wouldn't keep him, of course. They'd send him to the Shelter in the morning. "Feed him tonight and give him a place to sleep. . . . Can't take in every stray cat on the streets."

Jerry watched the kitten with wide puzzled eyes. How could it lap milk so fast? And it even spilled some on the rug. No manners at all! When Tony licked the last drop from the bowl, lay down beside it, and was instantly asleep, that was too much for Jerry. There were some things that every cat had to know. He yawned, stretched, ambled slowly around the room, and stopped beside the kitten.

"Careful, Jerry!" his people cried.

Jerry looked at them scornfully. Careful indeed! He'd teach that brat a lesson. He started at Tony's nose and roughly but thoroughly licked him right down to the tip of his shabby little tail. The idea of going to sleep unwashed! Jerry gave his own sleek coat a perfunctory bath, stretched out beside the kitten, spread a big paw across the scrawny little ribs, and went to sleep too.

• • •

OF course, Tony wasn't sent to the Shelter. He is very busy and happy trying to grow up to be as much like Jerry as possible. And Jerry is young again now that he has a kitten to train. He has taught Tony to scratch the linoleum beside his water bowl and howl mournfully when he wants a fresh drink.

He kept working until he convinced the kitten that claws are to be sharpened on the cat-scratching-rug, and no place else. He slapped him out of the brocade-covered armchair hundreds of times before Tony realized it actually was forbidden territory. He has even taught Tony to recognize the difference between best clothes which make lap-sitting definitely precarious, and old clothes that a few cat hairs won't hurt. Toys that had no charm last year are treasures now. The squeak of a rubber mouse is a call to great adventure. Who said Jerry was getting old?

It seems to me that a second-string pet is the best heartache insurance possible; and I know as well as anyone how difficult it is to keep even one pet in an apartment, or even a house; and how completely impossible it is to have two pets. (Consequently we have three.) But there is Jerry's story, and it's true.

I know so very many dogs and cats who have perfectly good homes and appreciate them; but who are just spoiling for lack of occupation. A dog can be made happy by learning to serve you in small ways; but cats are self-centered, and more interested in amusing themselves than in pleasing you, though, fortunately, they are more easily diverted than dogs.

My own cat spends long contented hours crouched intently before a mouse hole that yielded one small rodent about a year ago, and has produced nothing since. I know one elderly cat who regained his interest in life when his owner moved into a house with a garden. At sight of his first butterfly he shed his years and his dignity, and lunged into that back yard like any silly kitten.

Pets, like people, are as young as their hearts, and when youth goes out of their hearts they're old no matter how short a time they may have lived. Hobbies and the pursuit of near-hobbies that we have recently learned to call boondoggling serve to keep humanity out of mischief and this side of decrepitude. And to some extent mouse holes and odd jobs keep our pets alert. But any cat can tell you that raising kittens is more fun than watching unproductive mouse holes, or worrying rubber mice, or even catnip ones.

Any sort of baby thing will do, though, if the cat actually wants to train an orphan. There's Timmy, the Manx cat, who reared a baby rabbit and never could understand why, when they were so much alike in other ways, the rabbit wouldn't eat meat. Another cat I know was the inseparable friend of a white rat as long as the rat lived.

But don't imagine that every listless cat is grieving for an animal companion of some kind. Physical ills are far more common causes of dullness and lack of interest. The undernourished cat, the overfed cat, the rickety, the weak, the cat who has hairballs, and the cat who has worms will certainly not be cured by the introduction of a strange and possibly unwelcome competitor for the family attention. And some cats won't tolerate another animal of any sort in their homes.

If your cat's coat is lusterless and his eyes are dull, and he spends most of his time asleep in a corner, he needs the attention of a veterinary—not a pet of his own. If he cries for food, and then refuses to eat it—have his teeth examined. If he eats well but grows persistently thinner—he is not in good health. The obese, sluggish cat who eats and dozes and disturbs himself about nothing may be technically well, but he should be put on a rigid diet for a while.

Remember that your cat cannot be healthy or happy unless he is properly fed. And lean muscle beef alone is not a balanced diet. Raw eggs, raw kidney, an occasional meal of boiled and carefully boned fish, if the cat likes it, are all necessary variations. At least twice a week a teaspoonful of olive oil should be poured over his meat.

AND if he will eat leafy green vegetables by all means encourage him to do so—but don't forget that the vegetables are roughage, not nourishing food. If he likes milk, and it agrees with him, let him drink all he wants. A kitten needs more food and a wider variety of food, than a grown cat whose bones are formed, and who has little if any growing to do. Of course you see to it that fresh water is available for the cat at all times.

Even if your cat is healthy and reasonably active, but you know that the years are creeping up on him—think about persuading him to adopt a kitten or some other small animal. The new interest, the companionship, and the joy of having a pupil to whom all the lessons of a lifetime can be taught may add considerably to the time your pet will spend with you. You will find that the old cat will train the new one far more easily and thoroughly than you ever could—if he likes the idea. It all depends on that.

ter across the Southern California deserts to Los Angeles and 12 other communities, bringing through its circumference of 48 feet an inexhaustible supply, enough for 6,000,000 people. And Los Angeles alone will have 6,000,000. That is an achievement worth while.

When Baldwin, Prime Minister of England, expressed fear of a "mad dog attack" referring to the possibility that Mussolini might send a few hundred airplanes to visit the heart of London, he was not talking at random. The British have brains enough to take the airplane and what it will do seriously.

The British Government has ordered 40,000,000 gas masks, enough to protect the lungs of every man and woman in Great Britain. These will be issued instantly in case of a real emergency.

A 20-year-old Poughkeepsie girl "from the other side of the track," working for $6 a week, was invited by a young man to get into his automobile. "Want to go somewhere for a drink, baby?" was the invitation formula. In the morning the unfortunate girl was found in the man's car in a garage, dead, horribly mistreated and beaten to death. The excuse for mentioning so dreadful a crime is that it ought to warn all girls foolish enough to accept invitations from strange men.

England learns with agitation that individuals on the Continent are engaged in a regular traffic in English babies, bought from baby farms at a low price and taken abroad. Sometimes the infants are adopted and then rejected, the "owners" getting tired of them. Sometimes, the British report says, "they are adopted for shameful purposes."

In the Middle Ages there was important European traffic in young girls from Turkish harems. Flaxen-haired girls from Germany brought particularly high prices. The traffic in helpless young children seems even worse than that. In such trafficking, the Pied Piper of Hamelin legend is supposed to have originated.

Children will learn with pleasure that it is not necessary to eat spinach unless you like it. Other vegetables take the place of spinach with a menacing person called "Pop-Eye."

The Government, through WPA, will print a book on what to eat and how to eat it. One well-known New York physician ventures the opinion that spinach contains an objectionable amount of "vegetable uric acid."

Calves Liver and Potato Casserole.

One pound calves liver sliced thin, three cups thinly sliced potatoes, one minced onion, one and one-half cups milk. Flour liver well and season with salt and pepper. Place a layer of raw potatoes in a buttered casserole, season with salt, pepper and add some onion. Then place a layer of liver on top. Repeat and then add a final layer of potatoes. Pour in milk, cover and bake for one hour in a moderate oven. Remove cover and allow potatoes to brown lightly. Sprinkle with paprika, minced parsley and serve.

Santa Writes a Letter to Willy From North Pole

By Mary Graham Bonner

WILLY NILLY started over for the adhesive tape the next morning, but as he reached the village someone saw him and called out:

"Oh, Willy Nilly, there is a letter for you. If you'll go to the general store and postoffice you'll get it. It has a North Pole postmark on it. I believe it must be from Santa Claus."

Everyone bowed to Willy Nilly as he walked hurriedly to get his letter. It was wonderful, every one knew, to get a letter like that, after Christmas, too.

Willy Nilly got his letter, told everyone that it was indeed from Santa Claus—that Santa was feeling very fine, and then Willy Nilly hurried as quickly as his legs would carry him to Puddle Muddle.

In fact, he seemed so excited that Christopher Columbus Crow, who was taking a sun bath on top of his nest, cried out:

"Are your ears all fixed by any chance?"

"Not yet, not yet," shouted Willy Nilly. "But I have a letter here from Santa Claus. Let's go in and sit in front of the fire and read it."

They all went into the house, and Willy Nilly took off his heavy coat and cap and overshoes and sat down in the chair in front of the fire. The ducks perched on his shoulders and sat around the chair. Rip sat in his favorite place by Willy Nilly's feet with his head in Willy Nilly's lap. Sweet Face stood nearby, Top Notch and Christopher perched on chairs, and Willy Nilly commenced to read the letter,

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

» by WYNN «

For Sunday, Jan. 5.

HASTY decisions to be avoided, especially around noon and sunset; and if you do catch yourself making up your mind, don't do things till you've mentally taken time to digest the plan. A grand day for seeing other's side of it.

Mercy.

According to ancient doctrines, Jupiter is related to both justice and to mercy. This, at first, may seem simple, obvious, something we think we understand at once. But we come to difficult when we try to apply the idea of mercy to natural law. Natural law, such as gravity, sound and heat, works in perfect justice; how can we find mercy in the falling rock or forest fire?

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead is profitable more behind the scenes than out in front; more in what you think than in what you do. See the new angle all year for best results. Danger: March 5-April 10; July 3-Aug. 27, and Nov. 30-Jan. 25.

For Monday, Jan. 6.

Today's Sign of the Zodiac—Capricorn.

FIRST of two days for taking mental inventory of your ability and desire to serve; also health. Today: Judgment likely to be a bit sketchy in the tight spots, especially after business hours. Make everything constructive.

One More Chance.

Mercy is the quality of being less severe than might be entirely just, of withholding punishment when it is within our power to administer it. "Justice," it is said, "should be tempered with mercy." This is a lesson the world needs today more than any other, for the punishments of men are imperfect at best. We should grant to others that "one more chance" which we want ourselves.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead, if today is your birthday, is strong mentally. Make changes, when wise ones, in love affairs, relations with children, and generally. Plan for future benefits. Danger: March 6-April 13; July 6-Aug. 30; Dec. 3-Jan. 29.

Tuesday.

Luncheon Menu With Optional Leading Dishes

By Gladys T. Lang

Clam and Tomato Broth in Cups
Luncheon Egg Dish or Cauliflower with Creamed Lobster Sauce
Winter Green Salad
French Provincial Cheese Wafers
Luncheon Rolls
Molded Brandy Fruit Ring
Nut Cakes

Clam and Tomato Broth.

Blend three cups each of canned clam broth and tomato juice. Season highly with celery and onion salt, a dash of worcestershire sauce and a few drops of tabasco. Heat and serve topped with salted whipped cream.

Luncheon Egg Dish.

Cook and finely chop one peck (three pounds) of spinach. Mix with one-half cup of cream sauce and season with a little nutmeg, salt and pepper. Peel and coarsely chop one pound of mushrooms and saute in butter, then mix with the prepared spinach. Partly fill eight individual pyrex ramekins and in center of each make a well. In this set an egg and place in oven until the egg is cooked soft. Over all pour a heated sauce made with equal parts of a highly seasoned cream sauce and Hollandaise, well blended together.

Cauliflower With Creamed Lobster Sauce.

Soak the head of cauliflower in salted water with head down for one hour. Drain and cook in fresh salted water until tender, drain without cooling and cover with a folded towel on serving platter. If possible use two freshly boiled medium sized lobsters, removing the meat and slice. Mix three or four tablespoons of butter with the lobster coral and blend with two and a half teaspoons of flour, gradually pouring on two cups of cream or rich milk and cook until thickened. Add the lobster meat and season to taste and reheat. Pour this, piping hot over the whole cauliflower and garnish with watercress and lemon slices.

Winter Green Salad.

Brown two-thirds cup of bread crumbs with a little butter in the oven. Cool and mix in one tablespoon of finely grated horseradish. Place watercress and torn apart lettuce hearts in a bowl and toss with the crumbs. Blend well with a good French dressing.

French Provincial Cheese Wafers.

Grate one-fourth pound of Gruyere or soft American cheese. Work into this one-half cup of butter to a soft creamy mass; add two slightly beaten eggs, a spoonful of water, a pinch of salt and sufficient flour to make a stiff paste. Roll and reroll three times on a floured board and the last time cut in thin strips one-half inch wide and three inches long. Bake on a buttered tin in a quick oven to a light brown.

Molded Brandy Fruit Ring.

Take one can each of black seeded cherries and one No. 2 can of sliced pineapple and drain off the juice. Add the juice of one lemon to the juice and cook until slightly reduced. Over the cut-up fruit pour one cup of brandy and let stand covered, for an hour or two, stirring occasionally. Soak one and a half tablespoons of gelatin in one-fourth cup of cold water, then dissolve in the heated syrup. Cool. Drain fruit from brandy and add brandy to the syrup. Place the fruit in a cold rinsed mold and when the syrup has cooled pour over fruit. Place in the refrigerator for several hours. Unmold and garnish with sweetened whipped cream, flavored with brandy.

Nut Cakes.

Beat two eggs without separating, very light, adding one cup of brown sugar and continue beating, then add one large tablespoon of maple syrup and one teaspoon of vanilla. Sift together six level tablespoons of flour and one-fourth teaspoon of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Stir all together and add one heaping cup of chopped pecans. Butter the smallest size muffin pans and fill with mixture one-third full. Bake in a moderate oven about 15 minutes.

From the day he arrived back from Paris, Lindbergh and some newspapers clashed over his indifference to their staff members. . . . If one gazette "got the break" the others retaliated in some way. . . . Editorials aimed at Lindbergh said in part: "By trying to avoid publicity he is only enticing it. The way Garbo did!" . . . Lindbergh resented this, of course, and when he was ready to release pictures of his second son—he barred four newspapers. . . . One evening paper got the afternoon exclusive and two morning papers benefited. . . . Naturally the four orphans "went to work on him." . . . When Lindbergh splashed mud on reporters and spectators at a landing field by juggling the tail of his plane, they scolded him editorially for his behavior, etc. . . . And there were other manifestations of tit for tat—the stiffest poke coming from one of the four neglected papers. . . . When a plane (owned by a company with which Lindbergh is remotely connected) was wrecked in the West killing eight, the headline ran: "Lindbergh Plane Kills 8."

Because of the new rules about what songs mustn't be used on the radio, Henry Halstead, the orchestra leader, is forbidden to play his theme song, "Cuddle Up a Little Closer," which he has used nightly for 12 years! . . . A delicatessen man is judged by the herrings he kippurs. . . . The waggish groom of Helen Hayes (Charlie MacArthur) wired her: "Congratulations. I always like to see a radio actress make good on the stage." . . . Metro's publicity department sent out romance items about Margo, the Mexican star, built around a ring on which is inscribed: "Remember." . . . The fables hint of a possible split up between Margo and Eric Linden, who is supposed to have given her the jewel. . . . The fact is she has had it since a tot, a gift from her grandma. . . . Al Smith turned down an invite to be a guest at the White House. He doesn't wanna be a guest.

He wants to be the host!

A group of us were gabbing about the Berlin Olympics and Charles Sherrill, who praised Hitler, during the controversy about it. . . . Charlie, it appears, obtained the appointment as Ambassador to Turkey late in the Hoover administration. . . . When Roosevelt romped in, instead of sending him his formal resignation (as all diplomatic appointees are supposed to do) Sherrill sent a 500-word cable to the White House saying what a swell guy he was and how vitally important it was to American interests that he be kept at his job . . . Within a few hours he got back his answer, which is the funniest you've ever heard. It read: "Your resignation accepted."

SMALL TOWN GIRL

A Romantic Novel

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO.

"Did you want me to?" he asked grimly. "I told you, the first night, the way I felt about—not making love to you. Maybe I was a fool. I felt like one. It sounded—foolish, even to me! Quixotic. And yet I felt as if I were acting pretty decently, too."

"You were," she said softly.

"I gathered that you were—relieved," he told her. "It seemed to me you were."

"Oh, I was," Kay whispered. "I didn't want Priscilla ever to have the least chance to—believe what she said that day."

"What did she say to you?" he asked gently, beginning to understand.

"Do I have to draw a diagram?" Kay demanded, almost angrily.

He uttered a low ejaculation. "I'm mighty sorry," he declared. "She was always like that, sarcastic and—malicious. She's done it to me. Sometimes I've wanted to — wring her neck."

Kay laughed almost happily. "I don't mind now," she told him. "I can see now that it just proved how desperately hurt she was."

"Sure!" he agreed. He looked at her in an awkward embarrassment. "But that's why you want to wait till spring?"

Kay nodded slowly. "Partly," she said. Then she faced him honestly. "But Bob, I'm never going to let her have you, even then. Not if I can help it! Somebody else, maybe; but not her!"

He looked at her curiously. "See here," he asked, "are you in love with me?"

"No," she said. "But I hate her! And I like you too well to see you marry her. She's not good for you, Bob."

He was amused. "Why not?"

"Waiting for me to steady down," he replied. "Pris isn't the sort to take a chance. She always said she wouldn't marry me till I did settle down, and I was sort of stubborn about it. I used to run wild just to aggravate her, sometimes."

"Exactly!" Kay cried. "She's bad for you. She preaches, and acts superior, and you're pretty stubborn yourself, so you go out and get drunk or something just to show her." She smiled suddenly, almost appealingly. "You need to be praised and approved of, Bob," she told him. "That's what I'm going to do to you—from now till spring! As far as I'm concerned, everything you do is going to be wonderful!"

He asked in a sardonic tone, half amused, half angry: "Going to make a man out of me?"

"Going to make a great surgeon out of you," she corrected. "You wait and see!"

He chuckled, then asked: "But why? Where do you get off? If you're not in love with me" . . .

She laughed. "You keep thinking that, don't you?" She sat nursing her knees with her elbows, staring into the blankness of the fog. She was a moment silent; went on, half to herself: "No, Bob. I snatched at the chance to marry you, to save myself." She flashed one twinkling glance at him. "To save myself, not you, Bob!" And she went on: "I think I'd have married anyone, almost that night. I was—foolishly desperate. But I'm all over that now. Only I want to stay married to you for a few months, and I might as well be doing something useful during that time, don't you think?" Her eyes were mirthful.

He chuckled. "So you'll use the interval to reform me? And what then? After you've shaped me up to suit you, who'll you tackle next?"

Kay made a cheerful casual gesture. "Oh, I shall let you divorce me, and then I'll go back to Carvel and marry Elmer Radford," she declared. "He's a lineman for the power company up there, climbs poles and cuts wires and fastens them together again; and he's adored me since he was a boy."

He grinned. "But why wait, if he's so charming?"

"I have to straighten you out first!"

He was still grinning; but he fell silent, looking straight ahead.

Kay saw his face settle by slow degrees into a sullen mask. She thought him amusingly like a sulking little boy; was not at all surprised when he shook his head angrily and rose.

"Sorry," he said. "Sorry I can't oblige. We'll go back to town; but I'm afraid you'll have to let me handle my own affairs. Come on. Let's go!"

* * *

KAY in an equal silence helped him, working in her own province, while he rolled the blankets. When they descended to the water's edge, the tide had left the tender high and dry; she lent a hand at the task of dragging it down to the water. He ignored her, tugging at the bow of the little boat while Kay pushed and panted at the stern. When it was afloat, he left it with the bow in the mud and went up the bank for their belongings, and Kay at his heels carried her share of the load.

The fog was so thick that they had some difficulty in finding the Lark at her anchorage. Bob looked over his shoulder at last, and saw the little craft just ahead of them. Kay, in the stern and facing forward, must have seen it long before; and he demanded angrily:

"Why didn't you speak up? Want me to run into it, did you?"

"I thought we weren't speaking to each other any more," Kay told him in malicious amusement. "You were so glum!"

"All right, we're not!" he said savagely, and they came alongside.

When they were aboard, and the tender had been swung in over the rail—Kay tugged at a fall without suggestion from him—he uncovered the engine and after some difficulty started it. He left it idling and went forward to get the anchor up, and when it was clear of the mud, its weight all hanging on the chain, he came aft again, and let in the clutch, and with an eye on the compass set a course. He slowed the engine, dropped a loop around one spoke of the wheel, and went forward again to finish raising the anchor. Kay watched him with a secret smile, but she did not touch the wheel or interfere with his arrangements in the least degree.

He returned in stony silence to take the wheel again; and once they were outside the cove he changed their course to the southward. They plodded blindly through the fog, and Bob sat leaning forward, staring at nothing, glancing now and then at the compass. Kay beside him, only the wheel between them, kept her silence too.

Outside Camden Harbor they ran hard aground on a half-tide ledge just then submerged; and Bob uttered an exclamation of furious anger. He went below to appraise the damage, came on deck again. Kay was whistling softly to herself in the fog.

He lowered the tender and turned to face her. "Well, are you coming?" he demanded.

"Oh, are we going somewhere?" Kay asked.

"Naturally," he said.

"Then of course I'm coming," Kay assured him. "Whither thou goest, Bob . . . " She smiled and drew near, and he looked at the white duck trousers, the oil-skin jacket she had worn against the fog.

"We'll change our clothes," he decided. "We'll go the rest of the way by land!"

Ten minutes later, discreetly clad, they were in the tender; and he began to row into the harbor, groping his way through the fog. He made arrangements with a local ship carpenter to float the Lark at high tide, repair her damage, sail her to Boston. Then, with Kay quietly at his heels, he sought a garage and hired a car. At dusk that evening, they came back to his father's house on Beacon Hill.

Mrs. Dakin had a surprise for Kay and Bob; but when she told them what she had done, she appeared to be unconscious of the fact that they would be surprised.

"I knew you wouldn't want to stay here with us," she explained. "That is never wise, to have in-laws under the same roof."

She had taken on their behalf a small furnished apartment on Bay State road. "You've seen it, Bob," she said. "The Terrills.' They're going abroad for the summer; or rather, they have gone, and Sarah Terrill said they would like to let it. I thought it an opportunity too good to miss." She spoke to Kay. "I'm sure you'll like it. The windows look out across the river."

Kay saw the blank dismay in Bob's eyes, and she said quickly: "Of course we will!"

Mrs. Dakin seemed to assume that there was no least suggestion of impermanency about their marriage. "The Terrills won't be back till September," she said. "So you'll have plenty of time to look around for another place, decide exactly what you want."

Bob said in a harsh tone broken by pain and distress: "Mother, you know darned well we're not . . . not going to . . . "

Mrs. Dakin—Doctor Dakin was not at home when they arrived—was silent for a moment, as though she caught her breath. "I thought, since you went away together . . . "

"I went because Kay wanted to," Bob declared.

And Kay said gently: "But we're going on for a while. We thought, Mrs. Dakin, that in a few months people would begin to forget. I don't want to subject you all to too much publicity. By and by we can be divorced more quietly.

* * *

MRS. DAKIN seemed pale and tired. "In any case, you will want the apartment," she returned. "Then you and Bob can—make your plans without being affected by outside influences."

"It has sometimes seemed as though we were." There was in Mrs. Dakin's glance toward Bob no reproof, but merely an acceptance of the fact.

Bob perforce submitted to the arrangement she had made. He and Kay established themselves in the apartment by the river; and Mrs. Dakin helped them, and at Kay's invitation she and Dr. Dakin stayed to the dinner which Kay herself prepared. Kay watched them thoughtfully, seeking to discover what their attitude might be toward her; and after they were gone, she said to Bob:

Bob nodded, "They are that way," he assented unhappily. "They have been, more or less, ever since I was a boy. Father has left me to make my own decisions. He's never driven me, or urged me. I knew he wanted me to be a surgeon; and I suppose that's why I — started in that direction. Then the work did interest me, so — kept on." He shook his head. "I remember, when I started medical school, saying to him one day that I wanted to do well, and he asked why, and I said to please him. He told me not to consider him. He said, that day: 'I've done my part, Bob; given you what opportunities I could. You make what you like out of them, but if medicine isn't where you belong, don't stick to it on my account. What you do with your life is for you to decide'."

"They've made you stand on your own feet," Kay agreed.

Kay neither assented nor denied.

He and Kay settled that summer into a routine for the most part uneventful. Most of the people they knew were out of town, at the shore or in the mountains or in Europe; so there were not many social demands upon their time. They saw Pat Norris and Felicia; and Kay saw Genevieve often. She said to Bob one night:

"Genevieve's like your father and mother, Bob. I mean, she's — neutral!" She smiled at him. "It's as if they were all bound to let us fight this out together, without any interference."

"I don't intend to fight you, Kay," he told her. He hesitated, said then slowly: "I was pretty sore, when we came back from Maine. But — I'll play the game. Things are going to be the way you want them, and when you want them. Is that fair?"

"Fair and fine, Bob," she agreed. "Fair and fine!"

This was one of the few occasions when they had any personal talk together that summer. When they met others, when they went abroad or had guests here, their demeanor was natural and apparently unrestrained. Pat Norris repeatedly and loudly insisted that Bob and Kay had again demonstrated the magic virtues of Minton Green.

But when they were alone, there was a barrier between them, courteously maintained, relaxed not at all. Bob had ordinarily to be early at the hospital. He rose at 7 and was gone by half-past. He had insisted, despite Kay's remonstrance, on hiring a cook; and this woman prepared his breakfast while Kay slept, or affected to sleep, ignoring the sounds of Bob's movements in the next room, the hiss of water in the shower.

At noon he lunched elsewhere. The Fabre clinic had many visitors, doctors from out of town, some of them even from London or Paris; and Bob had ordinarily the task of entertaining them. Sometimes he brought them home to dinner, where Kay presided graciously at his table. He himself usually came home to dinner; but more often than not he isolated himself afterward. Sometimes he worked on medical papers to be read before conventions, or to be published in some professional magazine; at other times he returned to the clinic to work there, or to the hospital. He had many night calls to duty, and Kay sometimes suspected that these calls were prearranged, that he sought such pretexts for being away from home. But she was too wise to accuse him of the subterfuge.

SYNOPSIS.

Kay Brannan, late of Wellesley, leaves a wild yachting party in a passing rowboat manned by reckless Bob Dakin, medical doctor. Motoring her to Boston he drunkenly insists that they marry. Sober again however, he is horrified for he is engaged to Priscilla Hyde. The Dakins are unexpectedly kind and to quiet scandalous gossip, insist that Kay stay for a few weeks. But at a tea, Priscilla insults Kay and she accepts Pat Norris' offer of his boat for a honeymoon. On the cruise Bob and Kay are friendly but after a week's sailing he wishes to turn back. Kay gains his reluctant consent to wait until Spring for a divorce but he warns her that he loves Priscilla and has been thinking of her all the time.

3. —G. K. Chesterton, brilliant British essayist, says the miser is far less thrifty than the wastrel, because he wastes all his money to no purpose and with no good to anybody. The spendthrift wastes his money, but he at least spends it for the things he likes and purchases the wealth of others, and, thus, in the end does more to make things "thrive," which is the essence of the word "thrifty."

Love Theory

By Charlotte Goodman

THEODORE knew that Sally was in love with him; she just said she was not because she was repressed. It was a simple conclusion for Theodore; he rated an A in every course in psychology he had taken. In fact after he finished his college work in psychology he was going to go on and get an advanced degree in it so that he could teach it to other people.

The trouble with Sally was she did not know anything about psychology.

Theodore met her on the steps of the library. Bill was there too. He was another one of those ignorant people who knew nothing about psychology. He was a football player and was taking courses in the school of education where everybody, good students and poor, received just passing grades.

It was part of the advanced methods employed by the school of education. Theodore didn't think much of Bill; he could psychoanalyze him in five minutes and still have four left over.

Bill was a retrogressive type, that was all. Something that never passed beyond childhood, no matter how long it lived. Theodore would not have considered Bill at all, except that Sally never seemed able to make up her mind whom she preferred of the two of them.

"Bill is here again," Theodore said flippantly to Sally. It was a master stroke of psychology. It dismissed Bill and made him ridiculous at one and the same time.

"Sure I'm here, and what's it to you? I ought to poke you one in the nose for luck," said Bill.

Theodore's lips curled, but he stepped back and out of danger.

"Now boys, you musn't swear at one another like that," said Sally, "it isn't nice." Sally was brought up very carefully and all words spoken above that of a conversational tone seemed oaths to her.

"Me! It's only him—I mean he," said Theodore. "Every word he speaks is a violation because of the lack of intelligence he reveals."

"Aw, don't listen to this nut. Let's go for a walk," said Bill.

"I'd like to," said Sally, "but I can't. I went walking with you yesterday and it's his turn," she pointed at Theodore, "today. I'd promised I'd take turns until the dance day after tomorrow, and then I'd make up my mind who was going to be my boy friend," declared Sally.

Theodore smiled. Sally merely said she'd like to go with Bill because she did not; she was merely employing a defense mechanism of one kind or another. In the end her subconscious mind would assert itself, and then she would really tell Bill what she thought of him—the big, hulking dummy.

"Oh!" exclaimed Sally. "I almost tripped. Why aren't you careful?"

"I'm careful," said Theodore. Another psychological manifestation—she wanted him to be careful of her; she wanted to lean upon him. It was just the old story of the female putting her trust in the male.

• • •

THEODORE stood by Sally's side. He glanced at her, and turned his head away. A thick warmth passed through him, confusing him. For the moment he forgot about psychology and wondered if he might dare put his arm around Sally. He wondered for several moments.

"Ho, hum," said Sally. "It doesn't look at all like rain, does it?" Her hair was in little curls all around her head, like something Hellenic. Her shimmering eyelashes fluttered over her dreamy little eyes.

"Why should you think of rain on a beautiful day like this?" Theodore asked. He was stumped. There was no psychological or even logical reason for it.

"Well, I've got to get back to the house. I really must get some studying done," said Sally.

The next day it was Bill's turn to go walking with Sally, and Theodore kept away; he was smarter than Bill. He knew enough about psychology not to give Sally a chance to turn him away in the manner she had Bill.

And then the next night came, and it was the night of the dance, and Theodore called Sally up.

"I'm sorry, Theodore, but I'm going with Bill,' he was shocked to hear her say. Theodore hung up the receiver with slow deliberation. He was not so much hurt as puzzled. Every statement he had made had been expressed to condition Sally carefully, according to the best laws of psychology to go with him to the dance. And yet she had chosen Bill. Maybe that fellow knew something about psychology after all.

Theodore couldn't rest; he had to know. So the next day he went up to Bill, bluntly asking him about the matter. It was necessary in the interest of science.

"Aw, don't be a sap," said Bill. "I don't know nothing about psychology. That's a lot of bunk. But yesterday when we went walking I gave her a kiss and right away I knew whether she was going with me or not. I knew she was!"

Jackson Day Feeds Would Be Better Election Eve

PIERRE, S. D.

JIM FARLEY has Democrats all over the country throwing Jackson Day Dinners on January 8th. The price is graduated from $50 a plate in Washington, down to $1 out here in South Dakota.

That's about the right proportion. I can't imagine anybody, even a Washington politician, eatin' $50 worth of food, and I know we can't eat $1 worth out here.

I'm wondering if Jim isn't feedin' his outfit a little early. We found out twenty-five years ago that food gets votes, but the time to feed 'em is the night before election.

CONGRESS TO GET ANNUAL BUDGET MESSAGE MONDAY

FIGURES ON INCOME, OUTGO, TO BE GIVEN

Second of Usual Communications Will Be Read Separately by Clerks in Each Branch.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. — President Roosevelt's annual budget message will go to Congress on Monday. It will be read to the two houses separately by their clerks, in sharp contrast with the President's personal delivery last night of his annual message "on the state of the Union."

The second of the two regular communications to Congress will bring up to date the official estimates for the current fiscal year which still has six months to run, and project a schedule of revenues and expenditures for the fiscal year which will end on June 30, 1937.

The message was given to reporters today, to be held until Monday, and President Roosevelt held a special press conference to explain details.

On Balancing Budget.

The issue of balancing the budget, linked as it is with the broad issue of huge governmental expenditures, has become so battle-beset that Mr. Roosevelt's brief reference to it last night brought enthusiastic cheering from his Democratic followers, and derision from the Republicans. Thus Congress awaits the message with unusual interest.

In his annual message, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"We are justified in our present confidence. Restoration of national income, which shows continuing gains for the third successive year, supports the normal and logical policies under which agriculture and industry are returning to full activity.

"Under these policies we approach a balance of the national budget. National income increases: tax receipts, based on that income increase without the levying of new taxes. That is why I am able to say to this, the second session of the Seventy-fourth Congress, that, based on existing laws, it is my belief that no new taxes over and above the present taxes are advisable or necessary.

"National income increases; employment increases. Therefore, we can look forward to a reduction in the number of those citizens who are in need. There also we can anticipate a reduction in our appropriations for relief."

As to the contents of the budget message, there has been one positive indication—that ordinary governmental expenditures will be about the same or only slightly higher than for the current year, most recently estimated at $3,598,000,000. A decision on emergency requirements, set this year at $4,154,000,000, was reserved for the last moment.

Messages to White House.

Meanwhile, White House officials said that most of the more than 300 messages received before noon today were in praise of Mr. Roosevelt's address last night which took New Deal critics sharply to task and castigated "autocracy and aggression" abroad. Twenty-eight messages received were described as unfavorable. The criticism was said to have been that the address was political, a view taken by the Republicans. Nor did White House officials make any effort to deny that part of the speech could be described as of a political nature.

MEMORIAL IN COURT RECORD TO TELEPHONE OPERATOR

A formal record was made in Circuit Court yesterday as a memorial to Miss Jule Quinn, who for 18 years was in charge of the Civil Courts telephone switchboard. Miss Quinn died Thursday at her home, 4109 Magnolia avenue, of pneumonia. Her funeral was held yesterday.

The court memorial set forth that Miss Quinn was "loyal to her duties, patient and gracious to those with whom she dealt, truly a fine character. In tribute to her memory this court will stand adjourned during the hours of her funeral."
